Core Strength, Joint Flexibility For Better And Safer Running Performance

Practical Fitness With Wayne L. Westcott

By WAYNE WESTCOTT

Many runners spend all of their exercise time running, when some of that time would be better used for complementary physical conditioning. This is especially true this time of year when cross-country and road races are very prevalent and popular. I recommend that you set aside some training time to improve your core (midsection/lower back) strength and joint flexibility (hip/back) to reduce injury risk (especially low back issues) and to enable better fall/winter running experiences.

With respect to core strength, distance runners encounter relatively high levels of repetitive stress in their lower back area due to the landing force/shock absorption that is transmitted through their leg bones to their lumbar spine structures. The lower back muscles are continually engaged in maintaining an erect and efficient running posture throughout each training session and race. The abdominal muscles also play a major role in effective running by assisting both postural alignment and breathing mechanics, especially air exhalation.

Core Strength

If you have access to resistance machines, the best exercises to strengthen the midsection muscles are the low back machine, the abdominal machine, and the rotary torso machine that addresses the four oblique muscles on both sides of the trunk. If you train at home, I recommend the following exercises for conditioning the core muscles.

1. Basic Trunk Curl:

Lie face-up with knees slightly bent and feet on floor. Slowly curl your upper back off the floor until your lower back is pressed firmly against the floor. Place your hands behind your head to keep your neck in a neutral (straight) position throughout each repetition. Perform 15 to 30 controlled trunk curls to directly impact the front abdominal (rectus abdominis) muscles.

2. Basic Trunk Extension:

Lie face-down with your hands folded beneath your chin. Slowly curl your chest off the floor until your midsection is pressed firmly against the floor. If performed properly, you will feel a strong contraction in your lower back (erector spinae) muscles after just a few (5 to 10) trunk extensions. Some people need to anchor their feet/ankles to the floor and place a pillow under their hips in order to successfully raise their chest off the floor.

3. Twisting Trunk

Curls: Lie face-up with hands loosely-clasped behind your head, both feet off the floor, with your right leg straight and your left leg bent. Curl your upper back off the floor and maintain the curl-up position throughout the exercise. Slowly bring your right elbow and left knee together, then reverse leg positions and bring your left elbow and right knee together (or as close as possible). This exercise challenges your abdominal, oblique, and hip flexor muscles throughout every repetition. Aim for about 10 to 15 leg alternations in approximately 20 to 30 seconds.

Although one set of each exercise should be sufficient, you may perform additional sets if you so desire. Remember that slower exercise movements require more muscle tension than faster repetitions.

Joint Flexibility

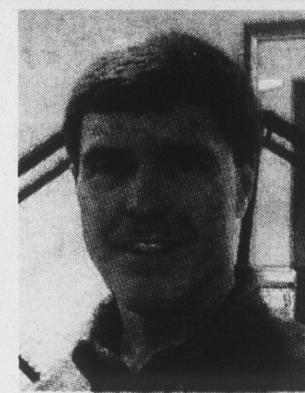

Many runners develop tight muscles, especially in the rear thighs and lower back. Tight hamstring (rear thigh) muscles actually present two problems for runners: increased injury risk and increased work effort for the quadriceps (front thigh) muscles. One of the best ways to stretch the hamstring muscles, and simultaneously strengthen the typically weaker quadriceps muscles, is performing full-range leg extensions on well-designed weight-stack machines. If these are not available, consider two highly-effective stretching exercises that loosen up both the hamstrings and lower back muscles.

Letter T Stretch:

Lie on the floor with both legs straight and your arms extended at right angles from your shoulders (resembling a letter T position). Gently lift your right leg as high as possible and cross it over your body, attempting to touch your right foot to your left hand. You should feel this stretch in your hamstring and lower back muscles as you hold the stretched position for about 30 seconds. Return to the beginning position and perform the stretch to the right by bringing your left foot up and across your body, attempting to touch your left foot to your right hand. I recommend alternately stretching at least twice to the left and twice to the right for best results.

Performing these core strengthening and stretching exercises two or three times each week could pay significant dividends for both better and safer running experiences throughout the fall/winter months.

Cahill Tops Ballot In School Board Preliminary

- Five Others Nominated
- O'Donnell Out Of Race
- Turnout 8.11 Percent

By SCOTT JACKSON

Making her first bid for elected office, Tina Cahill topped the field in the recent School Committee preliminary election.

The Sept. 14 preliminary race featured seven candidates, the top six of whom advanced to the final election on Nov. 2. The three candidates with the most votes in November will win four-year terms on the committee.

Cahill, a Grenwood Road resident, garnered 2,330 votes en route to her first-place finish. Incumbent committee member Emily Lebo of Highland Avenue was second with 2,216 votes. Courtney Perdios, a Ruggles Street resident who in February was appointed to an open seat on the committee, finished third with 1,984 votes.

Placing fourth in the preliminary was political newcomer Liberty Schaaf of Howe Street, who netted 1,915 votes. Incumbent Douglas Gutro of Arnold Street came in fifth with 1,777 votes, and first-time candidate Liz Speakman of Merrymount Road finished in sixth place with 1,351 votes.

Finishing in seventh place, and eliminated from the race, was first-time candidate Ellen Patterson O'Donnell of Hatherly Road with 857 votes.

Cahill was the top vote getter in three of the city's six wards, topping the ballot in Ward 5, where she resides, as well as Wards 4 and 6. Cahill finished second in Wards 2 and 3 and third in Ward 1.

Lebo was the top vote getter in Ward 3, her home ward. She finished second in Wards 1, 4, 5 and 6 and fourth in Ward 2.

Perdios topped the ballot in Ward 2, her home ward, and came in third in both Wards 3 and 6.

Schaaf was the top vote getter in Ward 1, her home district. She finished third in the voting in Ward 4.

Gutro was the third-highest vote getter in Ward 2, where he resides, and Ward 5, which he formerly represented on the City Council.

Speakman and O'Donnell polled sixth and seventh, respectively, in all six wards.

Turnout in the preliminary election was 8.11 percent, with 5,169 of the city's 63,755 registered voters casting ballots. Ward 1 had the highest turnout in the city at 12.84 percent, followed by Ward 5 (9.44 percent), Ward 6 (8.47 percent), Ward 3 (7.57 percent), Ward 2 (6.03 percent) and Ward 4 (4.51 percent).

The Nov. 2 election will also feature four contested City Council races. All city councillors are elected to two-year terms.

Four candidates are running for the three at-large spots. All three incumbents — Noel DiBona of Chickatabot Road, Nina Liang of Grand View Avenue, and Anne Mahoney of Ferriter Street — are seeking reelection. Joining them on the ballot is William Burke of Rice Road, who ran unsuccessfully for state repre-

Andronico Seeks Update On ARPA Funds

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 2 Councillor Anthony Andronico wants an update from city officials on how the federal stimulus funds Quincy received earlier this year have been spent to date, and also wants the administration to gather public input to determine how the remaining money should be used.

Mayor Thomas Koch in March announced Quincy would be receiving $46.3 million from the American Rescue Plan Act, a $1.9 trillion federal bill signed into law earlier that month. Communities have until December 2024 to use their ARPA money on eligible initiatives.

In May, Koch announced the city would be using a portion of the city's ARPA money and part of the $10.7 million earmarked for Quincy College — which was awarded separately from the funds the city itself received — to purchase the Munroe Building and a nearby parking lot in Quincy Center for $15 million.

Andronico introduced a resolution seeking a full accounting of the city's ARPA spending to date at Monday's City Council meeting. The resolution also asks the administration to seek public input on how the remaining funds should be spent, using either an online survey or public hearings.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1920s postcard view of the Walker-Barlow Drug Store in Wollaston. The store was in the corner of this building that was in what was called Depot Square off Beale Street next to the Wollaston railroad depot. Upon the death of its owner in 1925, a young Howard D. Johnson bought the business that was basically a lunchroom with a soda fountain also selling newspapers, sundries and cigars to railroad patrons. Johnson focused on selling a rich creamy ice cream that he purchased locally and it soon became his most popular product.

In 1928 he opened a seasonal ice cream stand on Wollaston Beach and in 1929 he opened his first full menu restaurant in the new Granite Trust Building in Quincy Square. The rest is history. This store remained open until the late 1960s when the property was taken for the MBTA's Wollaston Red Line Station parking lot. A granite marker on Beale Street marks the location of this first Howard Johnson's store.

Major Delay Averted In MBTA Extension

A threatened potential year and a half delay in the MBTA extension to Quincy has been averted and 22 North Quincy homes spared from demolition.

Mayor James R. McIntyre disclosed that the planned North Quincy transit station will be relocated 350 feet, preventing an ominous "long term" construction snag and the taking of the homes.

But, despite the development, the mayor does not expect trains to be running to Quincy until early 1970, mainly because of a construction slow-down caused by the ironworkers' strike. MBTA General Manager Leo Cusik had predicted the Quincy line would be in operation by Christmas 1969.

PEAK ENROLLMENT AT JUNIOR COLLEGE

Quincy Junior College has reached another milestone in its 10-year history with a fall total record enrollment of 1,687 students.

The figure announced by President Kenneth P. White is 122 students higher than last year's.

The growth the school has undergone in just a decade is shown by the comparison of this figure with the first enrollment in September 1958. Total students that opening year - 35!

The college, keeping pace with its growth, now has three deans assisting White. They are Hugo Saluti, Joseph J. Fluhr and Richard Mula.

CITY COUNCIL WILL DISCUSS INCINERATOR PLAN SATURDAY

"Our quarries are rapidly being filled," noted Committee Chairman Councillor at-Large George B. McDonald. "We are fast approaching a crucial stage in which a long-range refuse disposal system must be agreed upon and thoroughly planned. We can't fool around any long."

'When Ignorance Is Bliss, 'Tis Folly To Be Wise'

When I left Long Island, New York to live in Quincy, Massachusetts I expected forward thinking citizens who evolved from revolutionary times and the seat of liberty. Public Schools were born here. Higher education was the norm. Medical facilities were prominent because education was a cherished value.

The year 2021 does not reflect those values. When choosing a new Superintendent of Schools, Quincy turned down an educator with excellent credentials and opted for a lawyer with no educational background. Teachers in Quincy have gone years without a new contract. Would we prefer an all volunteer staff? Our town had a primary runoff for the persons we want to make the educational decisions of our school council. The voter turnout was 8%! Shame on us!

Some people have expressed fear that teachers may tell true history of our nation, warts and all. They prefer how we were protected from hearing negative actuality. Do we tell that slavery was an inconvenience to the black man or an oppression? Is America a melting pot because true democracy was built on the beliefs of many, or do we consider immigrants unworthy of our welcome? The only true founding fathers were here when our ships anchored. Now they have been removed to infertile reservations.

It seems to come down to a quote taught in a literature class. And, in keeping with our preference for the "sunny side" of history, the last half of the quote is usually omitted. "When ignorance is bliss, 'tis folly to be wise."

Development, Traffic 'Madness Needs To Stop'

Editor's note: The following email to the Planning Board and City Council was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication as a letter to the editor.

Hi,
Give me a break, when does this end?

You moved the bar with the 16 story building now you want to move it again to 20, what's next 40, 60?

You are turning us into a Boston without the infrastructure to handle the traffic.

This thing sticks up like a sore thumb. What does FoxRock want? Total domination of the city. By the time they are through building out Hospital Hill we'll be in grid lock.

Yeah I know the scenario, come in at 20 stories and then accept 18 like they gave up a lot and you got a lot..... wrong.

Changing the traffic light patterns doesn't work; look at Copeland Street and Common Street backing up traffic into Brewers Corner.

Look at Water Street and Liberty Street - the left hand lane demand from Water Street isn't working; you can sit there and wait for no cars until it times out. Look at Willard Street and Battery Park - it can back traffic all the way down Willard Street to the rotary.

This madness needs to stop. You are driving out the quality of life that Quincy is known for (was known for). These contractors pay the going rate for property and then want the City to accommodate them so they can make a profit.

Where is the 'Planning' in all of this? You're not a 'Planning Board' - you're a rubber stamp board.

Have you ever denied an appeal for one of these large contractors? I know you do for the small potatoes people.

Not a happy citizen of Quincy.

Quincy Rec 6 On 6 Soccer Tournament

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual 6 on 6 Soccer Tournament at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The 6 on 6 Soccer Tournament is a popular event and was well attended, with approximately 100 youngsters from the city's 17 playgrounds participating. Recreation Director Michelle Hanly said the tournament is a co-ed competition, with teams separated into three age groups: Midgets (8-10), Juniors (11-12), and Seniors (13-16). The event was run by sports specialists John Grasselli, Tim Durgin and Marissa McGue.

In the Midget division, teams from Forbes and Perkins playgrounds overcame stiff competition to meet in the championship. Both teams played hard in a game that came down to the final minutes, but it was Forbes Hill that would come away the victors. Dotty Lebo and Mackenzie Ilacqua both played especially well for Forbes, while Logan Mann and Nick Lamonica got a chance to showcase their skills for the Perkins team.

The Junior division featured a deep and competitive field, with two Forbes Hill teams dominating the competition and meeting in the final. Max Lamonica and Aedan Callaghan carried the eventual Forbes champions, while Arber Beqaj and Jason Lai kept things close for their respective Forbes team.

In the Senior division, the championship featured a matchup between an aggressive Heron Road team and a highly skilled Welcome Young team. In the end, Heron Road's suffocating defense and opportunistic offense proved to be too much for Welcome Young, who gave it their all on the field. Heron Road's offense was led by Declan Rogers, while the defense was held together by T.J. Manton and Will Codner. Notable performances on the Welcome Young side could be seen with Mike Zheng playing great as goalkeeper, and Ray Polena leading the team in scoring.

The 6 on 6 Soccer Tournament was a huge success; all teams showed great sportsmanship and enthusiasm.

Congratulations to all who participated.

Movie Review: 'Malignant'

By BOB GARVER

Sept. 10-12 was not a good weekend for new releases. Studios weren't eager to release many movies in the shadow of "Shang-Chi and the Legend of the Ten Rings." And considering that movie's $35 million second-weekend haul, I can't say I blame them. The best-performing new release didn't even come in second to "Shang-Chi," it came in third behind the fifth weekend of "Free Guy." I saw the horror movie "Malignant" on Friday night, a prime moviegoing time, and there couldn't have been more than ten people in the theater. But I guarantee that every one of those less-than-ten voices was screaming and laughing and screaming with laughter at the last act of this movie.

Madison (Annabelle Wallis) is pregnant for the fourth time in two years, having suffered three miscarriages. Her husband (Jake Abel) gets mad at her during an argument and smashes her head against the wall. He then goes downstairs where doors open, things go bump, and he's... eliminated from the movie. Madison's sister Sydney (Maddie Hasson) later comments that "nobody deserves to die like that," but yeah, he did. Unless maybe you count getting off too easy as being undeserving.

Madison is also attacked by the mysterious entity, resulting in miscarriage number four, and even worse, the police (George Young and Michole Briana White) suspect her of the crime. She returns home only to be terrorized by visions of other murders. The victims were all doctors at a hospital where she stayed as a child. She gets a mysterious phone call from Gabriel, a sort of invisible friend from her childhood. He's somehow behind the murders, and he clearly has plans for her, but who or what is he exactly?

So far we have a horror movie like a million horror movies before it: cheap jump scares, a big house with lots of rooms and hiding spaces, childhood trauma (complete with an invisible friend), and a protagonist with a story that no one will believe. There's even a killer named Gabriel, a name bad movies love to use for villains because they think they're being clever ironically naming an evil force after a famous angel. There's so little originality here that it's actually a blessing when some of the actors give terrible line readings because at least those scenes stand out, if only for the wrong reasons. But then we learn the truth about Gabriel, which rips off not one, but two episodes of "South Park."

Suddenly this is the most bonkers movie to come down the pike in years. We get a pair of action sequences — one in a jail cell and the other in a police station — that take us back to the early 2000's with "Matrix"-ripoff action and editing. Just like characters in that movie famously bent backwards, so does at least one character here face in an odd direction. Mind you, none of this action is particularly "good," it's just memorable because of the brutality and the nature of one of the participants.

A movie as absurd as "Malignant" deserves an absurd letter grade. I'm giving it a B-minus-minus. The first 80% of this movie is bland and terrible, the last 20% is over the top and terrible. Director James Wan is at his haunted-house-obsessed worst here, and I could tell Wallis and Hasson were being coached by the same person who directed Elisabeth Moss in "The Invisible Man" because there's so much overlap in the acting styles (but here the originality is gone). This movie is not worth a recommendation in any sort of traditional sense, yet I feel compelled to give it my highest recommendation. My screening ended after midnight and I was seriously tempted to immediately call up family members and tell them about the weirdness of this movie. "Malignant" had me laughing harder than any movie in the last two years, though I'm not sure it was always going for laughs.

Grade: B -

"Malignant" is playing in theaters and available for streaming on HBO Max. The film is rated R for strong horror violence and gruesome images, and for language. Its running time is 111 minutes.

Spinach Rolls

By MARIE

Recently my son, Dom, made this simple recipe with spinach and it is a spinach roll and very easy to make. This recipe is always a big hit with and a perfect side dish.

DIRECTIONS and INGREDIENTS

1 bag of fresh spinach
2 eggs
Salt and pepper
½ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons of olive oil

Boil ½ bag of the fresh spinach (keep the other half bag for the latter part of this recipe).

Chop the cooked spinach up as fine as you can.

In a skillet and in the hot oil start sautéing the spinach.

Add the beaten eggs and ½ cup of either Romano or parmesan cheese, then add salt and pepper and cook until done.

Set aside to cool slightly so it can be handled.

Boil the rest of the spinach leaves for a couple of minutes until the spinach is limp.

When cooled spread out the leaves and spread egg and spinach mixture in the center of each.

Roll them up, tucking the edges under.

Keep in a warming oven until ready to serve.

These spinach rolls go with anything from pasta to chicken. When I made them, I served them with breaded chicken breast and cherry tomatoes and this was a pretty and colorful combination.

Strawberry Chia Pudding

By SUZIE

In a serving of chia seeds (about 2 tablespoons), you get about 12 grams of carbohydrates, 11 grams of fiber (which helps keep blood sugar at an even keel), 9 grams of healthy fat, and 4.5 grams protein.

They also contain all nine amino acids in proper ratios and are a great alternative for vegetarians, since they are considered a complete protein.

A serving contains 18 percent of the RDA for calcium (for healthy bones), 27 percent RDA for phosphorus (also important for bones, teeth as well as cellular structure) 30 percent for manganese (also important for proper bone formation as well as skin integrity), as well as zinc (important for immune function and hormone balance) and copper (necessary for healthy skin, hair, and helps with the formation of hemoglobin).

They are rich in omega 3 fatty acids which are needed for various important functions, including but not limited to warding off cancers and arthritis, heart disease, and are imperative for brain health and even mood stabilization.

STRAWBERRY CHIA PUDDING

16 ounces fresh strawberries
1 1/2 cups (or one 13 1/2-ounce can) coconut milk
1/4 cup raw honey, or to taste
1 vanilla bean, scraped or 1 teaspoon vanilla
3/4 teaspoon finely grated lime zest
1/2 cup chia seeds

Place the strawberries, coconut milk, honey, vanilla, and lime zest in a blender and blend until smooth. Taste and add more honey if desired.

Place the chia seeds in a large bowl, pour the strawberry mixture on top, and whisk thoroughly.

Let stand for 10 minutes and whisk again.

Cover and refrigerate for at least 4 hours and up to 3 days.

Stir the pudding before serving. The longer it sits, the thicker the pudding will become; if you find that it is too thick, whisk in a little water (or coconut water, if you have some on hand).

The City of Quincy and the Quincy Art Association announce the annual Quincy ArtsFest show in Merrymount Park has been moved to May, 2022.

The postponement will allow for entries from Quincy Public Schools students who have not had art classes since the start of the pandemic, city officials said in a press release.

"The inclusion of our student-artists is an integral part of our show," said

Commissioner of Natural Resources Dave Murphy. "We want to make sure that the students and art teachers have the proper time to prepare and participate in this fantastic community event." The show was originally scheduled for late September. Due to the lack of children's art and conflicts with other community events, organizers decided the best course of action was to postpone the show in order to maintain a quality and level of participation commensurate with the twenty-plus year history of the event.

Organizers are preparing for a great show in mid-May that will feature art displays, activities, crafts, children's art activities, great live entertainment, and much more.

Added Murphy: "September is a beautiful time to be in Merrymount Park but we want to make sure we maintain the quality and reputation that's been established over two decades. As we slowly emerge from the pandemic, we are gearing up for one of the best shows in ArtsFest history."

Social Security Matters

Will Retiring Early From Work Affect My Social Security?

By RUSSELL GLOOR

National Social Security Advisor

At the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm Of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: I stopped working at age 55, well before my full retirement age of 66 years and 10 months. I had over 35 years working prior to retiring from work. I don't intend to start collecting Social Security until my full retirement age. Will I be penalized for all those years between when I stopped working and my full retirement age? Signed: Planning Ahead

Dear Planning Ahead: Will you be "penalized?" No, because whenever you claim your Social Security benefit, it will be based upon the highest-earning 35 years over your entire lifetime (with the early years adjusted for inflation). Would your benefit be higher if you had continued to work and have high earnings longer? Probably, because earnings in the latter part of one's career are usually considerably higher than those in the early years. But everyone's situation is different.

Higher earnings today don't necessarily replace those in earlier years because of the inflation adjustment. For example, someone with $50,000 in 1990 earnings would need to earn more than about $115,000 in today's dollars to replace the earlier year. And keep in mind that your benefit computation uses only the dollars which you paid SS taxes on. So, someone earning $500,000 this year would, for benefit computation purposes, only get credit for $142,800 in earnings because the latter amount is what Social Security FICA (or Self Employment) taxes were paid on.

It is from your highest-earning 35 year history that your Average Indexed Monthly Earnings or "AIME" is determined, followed by yet another formula to convert your AIME to your "primary insurance amount" or "PIA." Your PIA is what you are entitled to in the month you attain your full retirement age (FRA). If you claim before your full retirement age you'll get less than your PIA, and if you claim after your FRA, you'll get more than your Primary Insurance Amount. If you delay claiming past your full retirement age, you'll earn delayed retirement credits (DRCs) up to age 70, at which time your benefit could be as much as 29% more than your PIA. Of course, you can also claim at any time between your FRA and age 70 to get all DRCs you've earned to the point you claim.

So, as you can see, the Social Security benefit you get will be determined by two main things - your 35 year lifetime earnings history, and the age at which you claim. You can't do much now to change your 35 year earnings history (short of returning to work and having very high current earnings), but you can control when you claim. And that decision, of course, should consider your health and your life expectancy, how badly you need the money, and your marital status. Your marital status is important if your spouse can collect a spousal benefit from your record, or if you are concerned about the amount your survivor(s) will receive if you die first.

City Council Meetings Remain Remote

By SCOTT JACKSON

City Council President Nina Liang said she is eager to resume in-person meetings, though councillors continue to meet remotely for the time being.

The council has been meeting remotely amid the COVID-19 pandemic since March 2020. Gov. Charlie Baker had issued an emergency order allowing municipal bodies like the council to meet remotely at that time, and legislation enacted this past June allows virtual meetings to continue until April 1, 2022.

Liang, in a recent interview, said she had been optimistic the council would be able to meet in-person this month. With cases up amid the spread of the highly transmissible delta variant, Liang said that the body would instead keep meeting remotely for the time being.

"When this first happened back in the spring of 2020, I thought - I think everyone thought - by May of 2020 this would all be gone, so I was like, 'OK, great, we'll be back in-person by the time budget season comes around.' That couldn't happen," Liang said.

"Then I thought, 'OK, September 2020 we'll be back in-person,' and then of course cases kept spiking. Then I thought January 2021 we'll be back in-person. After the holidays, cases kept going up.

"With the vaccines coming out in the spring, I really thought this September would be it - we would be back in-person - but now we have the delta variant and cases are increasing despite whether people are vaccinated or not."

Liang said the meetings would stay remote to protect the health of councillors, municipal employees who attend the meetings and the general public.

"When it comes to us, yes, there are nine of us councillors, you have the council staff, the staff in the mayor's office, but our meetings are all public. We want to make sure that whoever wants to come to the meeting can come to the meeting. Whether they are participating or just sitting in on the meeting, we need to make sure we guarantee that engagement and access and if I can't do that in a way that is safe for everyone, I don't feel comfortable doing it," Liang said.

"There are some folks who say, 'I'm vaccinated and I feel comfortable coming in-person.' Great, but what about the person at home that's like, 'well, I don't feel comfortable coming in-person,' and now they can't participate."

"In order to keep it fair and accessible to everyone,

New Residential Building Eyed For Willard Street

cant's traffic engineer, said the proposed building would create 140 new vehicle trips on a daily basis - 70 into the site and 70 out of it. During the peak commuting period, Dirk said the building would generate 10 trips per hour.

"That is one additional vehicle trip every six minutes during the peak hour," he said. "It's not a substantial increase in terms of traffic."

Members of the public, however, told the Planning Board they were concerned about the size of the building and the impact it would have on traffic in the area. A pair of area residents voiced concerns during the public hearing, while others wrote letters to the board expressing concerns.

Sheryl Erikson, a resident of Bunker Hill Lane, told the board the project should be reduced in size.

"I appreciate the work that the developer has put into this, but the building is too big for that lot of land, bottom line. West Quincy has been built up with numerous projects. The traffic at rush hour is unbelievable," Erikson said. "I do agree he bought the land, he is entitled to develop it, but I would like to see this project scaled down."

In a written letter to the board, Andrea Bartick of Salem Street said the city should impose a temporary moratorium on new multi-family residential construction.

"With all this building going on, we will have to hire more police, firemen and school teachers, build more schools. Our water system is old and probably can't handle all the additional apartments and condos. Our roads are a mess with all the traffic we have now. Traffic on Willard Street is so bad weekday afternoons cars are at a standstill," Bartick wrote.

"Again, I want to go on the record that I strongly oppose this new building. We should stop all new multi-family buildings until what is in the process of being built is completed."

In his letter to the board, Gregg Constantino of Larry Place said he was extremely opposed to the proposed plan.

"Willard Street is already congested with a lot of traffic, especially near the rotary going and coming from 93 south and 93 north. Residents on Larry Place and Larry Street already have a hard enough time getting in and out of street because of speeding during off-peak hours and lines of gridlock at rush hour," Constantino said. "I can already imagine what a minimum of 64 potential new cars will do to the area and added congestion."

Following the public comments, board chairperson Richard Meade said members were still awaiting additional information about the proposal and asked that the hearing be continued for two months.

In other business on Sept. 8, the Planning Board:

Continued until Oct. 13 the public hearing on the request of APO3 LLC for site plan review and a special permit to construct a new mixed-use building with nine residential units and ground-floor retail at 27 Franklin St.

Continued until Nov. 10 the public hearing on Minh Van's request for site plan review to construct two duplex-style homes at 62 Billings St.

"Rock Solid Security"

On Sept. 5, at approximately 1:40 a.m., Officer O'Hare was dispatched to Adams Street and Furnace Brook Parkway for a reported possible car accident. This call originated from Brewster Ambulance employees who came upon a motor vehicle on a median.

Upon Officer O'Hare's arrival, he observed a red sedan resting on the traffic island located at the southern corner of the Adams Street and Furnace Brook Parkway intersection. The vehicle appeared to have been travelling north-east on Furnace Brook Parkway and attempted to turn right onto Adams Street. Markings on the island show the vehicle struck the curb after leaving the marked lane, went over the island's planting bed, and struck a yield sign.

The vehicle came to rest with the front tires on the street and the rear end of the vehicle still on the traffic island. The front left wheel was destroyed and at an odd angle away from its suspension parts. A female was sitting in the driver's seat. Medics from the ambulance were at the driver's side of the vehicle telling the driver not to move the vehicle.

When Officer O'Hare got to the driver's side of the vehicle, the driver's window was open, the keys were still in the ignition with the power on, but the vehicle was not running. Officer C. Paccioretti, who arrived on scene, attempted to speak with the operator and was immediately confronted by her. The operator began yelling at Officer Paccioretti about how she should respect her as a female.

When Officer Paccioretti asked her what happened and where she was coming from the operator continued to scream at her saying "No, we're not doing this... I see what you're trying to do." Officer O'Hare then went to the driver's window and asked the operator what her name was. She replied by saying "I ain't talking to you while that b@#$% is there. She needs to get in her car and leave."

Officer O'Hare told the operator that his partner, Officer Paccioretti, was not going to leave the scene and that she could speak with him. The operator became argumentative and closed the window and repeatedly yelled no. She never opened the window from that point forward and refused to exit the vehicle.

Officer O'Hare asked the operator if she could get out of the car, due to fluids leaking out from the bottom. The operator refused to get out of the car. Officer O'Hare explained to the operator that she was involved in an accident and she needed to exit the car so a tow truck could remove it from the island. The operator replied by yelling at him and stated, "I wasn't in a car accident. I didn't hit anybody." Officer O'Hare told her it was a single vehicle accident and her car would need to be towed due to the extensive damage to the front left of the car.

A supervisor was requested at the scene. An EMT attempted to speak with the operator, to check her wellbeing, and was met with the operator saying "f#$% you bitch, I ain't talking to you."

Sergeant Greene arrived on scene. Officer O'Hare informed Sergeant Greene that the operator was refusing to exit the vehicle with the fluids leaking from beneath, she was continuously yelling at everyone who approached the window, and she still hadn't identified herself. Sergeant Greene began to try to speak with the operator via the side rear window which she had opened. She began to yell at him and said she wasn't going to speak with anyone or get out of the car until her boyfriend arrived on scene. At this time, she was on the phone with a male who said he would come to the scene.

Sergeant Greene relayed to this male our exact location and request that he respond. The operator continued to yell and also began crying at times. Sergeant Greene informed the operator she would need to identify herself. He told her he would need her license and she refused to give it to him. He advised her that failing to identify herself while operating a motor vehicle was an arrestable offense. He again asked for her license. She once again refused.

Sergeant Greene then advised the operator that she was under arrest for failure to identify. She began to cry and started yelling that she just wanted to go home. Sergeant Greene stayed by the car while officers tried to determine the registered owner's name. Sergeant Greene requested the wagon for a prisoner transport and it was decided that officers would wait for her boyfriend to arrive on scene to help de-escalate the situation. Once her boyfriend arrived on scene, the operator opened the driver's door and exited the vehicle.

By that point, 25 minutes had elapsed since Officer O'Hare's first contact with the operator. Once standing, she stumbled forward and was unsteady on her feet. With the operator out of the car, Officer O'Hare had a better opportunity to make a series of observations. He observed that her eyes were red and blood shot, there was still a moderate the safest way I think to move forward to make sure everyone can participate is to keep it on Zoom for now."

Liang said she is in regular contact with City Clerk Nicole Crispo and Clerk of Committee Jennifer Manning, as well as her eight fellow councillors.

"We are keeping an eye on things. We always have been," Liang said. "We're always talking and I am always checking with my colleagues as well, getting their input, getting their feedback on what they think and what they are hearing from residents too."

"Again, as of right now the safest way for everyone to be able to access these meetings just has to continue to be on Zoom for now. There are people itching to be back in-person. I am too. I love to see folks. As you know, I am a hugger, so I love to see people."

While the council and most other boards in Quincy have met remotely throughout the pandemic, the School Committee has met in-person. Those meetings are closed to the public, however, with only committee members, the superintendent, and other selected guests attending in-person, with guests cycling in and out of the room during the meeting; the public is able to watch the meetings on television.

Liang said she and her colleagues have considered using a similar model but said it might not make sense for councillors to take that approach.

"You have to understand there is also not just physical access, but access for those who may be hard of hearing, and so the technology behind what is required to get this done takes a lot of coordination with us and with QATV and the people in-person managing the microphones, managing the laptops, managing the connections to the internet," she said. "There is a lot that goes into that and at the end of the day right now I don't see how it is going to be possible to do it so that people's public input maybe doesn't get missed or something."

"What about the person who is listening through Zoom," she added, "and for whatever reason us in the chamber, when we're having a discussion, maybe the sound isn't carrying over to the laptop so that the person at home can't hear us through Zoom? And, we're not going to know that in real time."

"It's something we're exploring, yes, but we haven't perfected it, and if that means limiting access, I'm not willing to move forward with something that will cut off people's access."

Liang spoke to The Sun on Sept. 15, the day after voters in Boston went to the polls to cast ballots in the city's preliminary mayoral election. Boston City Councillor Michelle Wu topped the field with 33.36 percent of the vote and will face fellow Councillor Annissa Essaibi George, who garnered 22.48 percent of the vote, in November's final election.

Liang said Wu has been a friend and mentor to her since 2015 – when Liang first ran for office – and she was excited with the results of the preliminary election.

"I love Michelle. When the news came in the way it did last night and the results came in the way they did, I was stoked. I am stoked," Liang said. "She has been an incredible friend and mentor over the years. When I first ran for office and had no idea what I was doing, I was really lucky to be surrounded by very, very, very knowledgeable people in this field, and she was one of them."

"I think the thing that stuck out most for me, and I tell this story and I have been honored to tell this story so many times before now, is one time she had called me up 10 o'clock at night. Mind you, she was running for reelection too at the time in 2015. She calls me up at 10 o'clock and I thought I was in trouble. I pull over and was like, 'why is she calling me,' and she was like, 'did you drink water today? Are you good? How are you feeling?' That is who Michelle is. That is the kind of person she is."

"When it comes to the work that she does and things she proposes and how she represents that city, she is brilliant. She is incredibly thoughtful about the work she puts out there. She is very deliberate, very intentional, listens very, very, very well and pivots depending on what the people she serves wants. She is definitely an inspiration to me and how I feel like I have been able to be a councillor these last six years. I am really excited for her."

Wu is also someone who values relationships with neighboring communities like Quincy, Liang added.

"She is also one of the people that appreciates relationships with surrounding cities and towns. She has been invested in Quincy well before her run for mayor – well before my time in joining the council," Liang said. "She has come through for this city. She showed up for the city. She asks about our city and she recognizes and acknowledges we have our own standing too so let's work together, and she respects that."

"I think people look at Boston and it is a behemoth. Of course it is. Look at the people who come from Boston. Look at Marty [Walsh]. But she always comes and approaches it with respect. It's like, 'you're our neighboring city, let's work together,' and she has always had that mentality."

"As somebody who represents Quincy, regardless if it is her or whoever else, that is something I really respect and appreciate about our neighboring elected officials – they respect and appreciate our position here and our strengths here and they want to work together, and that is what she always does."

"Professionally, that makes me really excited and personally I am a huge fan of hers, so I am very excited."

Nat'l Guard Busing Some Quincy Students

As part of its ongoing effort to support school-age children and their families, the Massachusetts National Guard will expand its school transportation mission to five additional communities.

In response to requests for assistance by local government officials, the Guard this week began service in Brockton, Framingham, Holyoke, Quincy, and Woburn. This latest activation falls within Governor Baker's Order dated Sept. 13 which makes up to 250 personnel available for transportation assistance.

This week, more than 190 members of the Guard completed the driver's cer-tification process to operate transport vans known as 7D vehicles. In accordance with school transportation worker requirements, the orientation process included vehicle training, background screening, as well as a thorough review of all health and safety measures.

Beyond those certified as drivers, approximately 40 members of the Guard are activated to provide operational support for the mission.

The Massachusetts National Guard trains regularly with law enforcement, civilian, and other military agencies to provide a broad spectrum of services in support of security, logistics, disaster relief, and other missions. The Guard has a proven track record of success supporting civilian authorities. Their frequent side-by-side training with state and local first responders makes them well-suited for a variety of missions.

smell of alcohol emanating from her person, she was continuing to yell once outside of the vehicle, and her behavior became more erratic.

While waiting for the prisoner transport wagon to arrive on scene, the operator unsteadily walked toward EMTs and began yelling and swearing at them. A Quincy Fire lieutenant stepped in between and Sergeant Greene and Officer O'Hare redirected the operator towards her car. As the operator was yelling towards firefighters on scene, she raised her arms towards her side and it was at this time that Sergeant Greene and Officer O'Hare each grabbed an arm and brought them behind her. She began to struggle a bit, and to avoid going to the ground, officers guided her toward her car where they were able to get her into handcuffs. Due to her erratic behavior and unsteadiness on her feet, the option to perform standard field sobriety tests would not be safe, and were not performed.

The operator, a 29-year-old from Quincy, was arrested and charged with operation under the influence of alcohol, marked lanes violation, and failure to identify.

O'Donnell Highlights Registry Of Deeds Customer Service Center

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds consumers if they have a Registry question, the answer is just a phone call away by dialing the Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101. The department is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"The Customer Service Center is a one-stop shop for Norfolk County homeowners and institutional users who have land related document questions," said O'Donnell. "These questions can vary such as confirming the current ownership of a particular property, or verifying if a discharge of a property's mortgage has been filed after the loan has been paid off. We are glad to help with any inquiry, whether you come through our doors or call us by phone."

O'Donnell further noted, "The department can also inform customers about the various cost for filing and receiving land documents. Upon a customer's request - whether it's by visiting us here at the Registry or by a direct mail request - we can provide copies of documents to you for a fee of $1 per page, plus an additional $1 per document to cover the cost of postage."

The Registry only accepts cash or check payments. In addition, the Customer Service Center staff is happy to answer questions about the Homestead Act, a law which provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

City Salutes Seven Generals At Bridge, Park Dedication

By SCOTT JACKSON

Seven sons of Quincy were recently recognized for their service to the United States as the city dedicated the new Generals Bridge and Park in Quincy Center.

The bridge and park honor 18 generals in total who have served the nation since the Revolutionary War. Seven of the generals, who have served since World War II, are honored with statuary within the park.

The park includes life-size statues of three four-star generals: Joseph Dunford Jr., James McConville, and Gordon Sullivan. Four generals have busts within the park: Francis McGinn, Ronald Rand, the late Stephen Keefe Jr. and the late Charles Sweeney.

The park also includes a water fountain and benches. Flags of the Army, Air Force, Coast Guard, Marine Corps and Navy fly above one section of the park, while the flags of the United States, Massachusetts and Quincy fly above a separate section.

Each of the five living generals was invited to speak at the dedication for the bridge and park on Sept. 11, and each was introduced by a family member, friend or colleague. Guests were invited to speak on behalf of the two late generals.

Gen. Joseph Dunford Jr., who was raised in Merrymount, served as the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's highest-ranking military officer, from 2015 to 2019. Dunford had served as the commandant of the Marine Corps from 2014 to 2015 and was the commander International Security Assistance Force from 2013 to 2014, in which capacity he oversaw all U.S. and allied troops in Afghanistan.

Among other positions, Dunford is currently the chairman of the board for the Semper Fi & America's Fund.

Dunford said the bridge and park honor the traditions of which the city of Quincy is most proud.

"I think the generals honored here today are simply links in a long chain of men and women from Quincy who have sought to make a difference by living a life characterized by service," he said. "If you look at it that way, the bridge and the park are less about recognizing any of us as individuals and more about highlighting the values and the traditions that are most important to Quincy, Massachusetts."

"What we are honoring today are the Quincy traditions that we are most proud of: hard work, character, honor, commitment and respect for our neighbors."

GENERAL GORDON SULLIVAN (at podium) speaks at the dedication of the Generals Bridge and Park Sept. 11 in Quincy Center. Seated from left to right are: Major David Keefe, representing his father the late Major General Stephen T. Keefe, Jr.; Captain Richard Stratton, representing the late Major General Charles W. Sweeney; Major General Francis M. McGinn, Brigadier General Ronald T. Rand, Mayor Thomas Koch, Cong. Stephen Lynch, General Joseph F. Dunford, Jr. and General James C. McConville. Seven generals with local ties were honored at the dedication. Bronze statues were unveiled for Generals Dunford, McConville and Sullivan; and bronze busts were dedicated to the late Major General Keefe, the late Major General Sweeney, Major General McGinn and Brigadier General Rand. Gen. Sullivan, who was raised in West Quincy, served as the chief of staff of the Army from 1991 to 1995. He had served as the Army's vice chief of staff from 1990 to 1991 and had previously been the commanding general of the 1st Infantry Division. Sullivan, who turns 84 on Sept. 25, said in his remarks he would serve again if given the chance. "There is nothing like being in a uniform and serving the United States of America. I have told many people, if I could do it again, I would. I'm not kidding," he said, before adding, "I don't know how good I'd be."

today is the idea of service, the calling, as many have said, to be part of something greater than yourself."

Dunford, whose father, Joseph Sr., is a Korean War veteran and retired Boston police officer, said he did not have to look far for role models while growing up in Quincy.

"I was inspired to serve by my parents, my uncles and many of our Quincy neighbors, our coaches, and our teachers," Dunford said. "One thing about growing up in Quincy, you don't need to look far for role models, and I'm not going to call out members of my family...but obviously for me personally, both in terms of service and defining for me what it means to be a man of character, it is obviously my dad sitting here in the front row.

"What I learned from these individuals was reinforced when I attended the traditional Quincy day events - Memorial Day, Flag Day, Independence Day and Veterans Day. How a community celebrates these occasions says a lot about the priorities of a city. But frankly only when I traveled great distances from Quincy in my 42 years in uniform, only in visiting places that don't have what we have, did I really gain an appreciation for what it means to be from Quincy.

GEN. JAMES MCCONVILLE, who was also raised in Merrymount, has served as the chief of staff of the Army since 2019. McConville was the Army's vice chief of staff from 2017 to 2019 and had previously served as the commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division. Early on in his remarks, McConville asked all the veterans in attendance, as well as their families, to rise and be recognized. "Look at all these veterans - absolutely amazing," he said. "I want to thank you all for your service, I want to thank you for your sacrifice, and I want to thank you for commitment to our nation and so proudly representing Quincy."

"What I learned from being away is we can't take what we have for granted. I also learned that the real strength of our country - and what will allow us to remain the land of the free and the home of the brave

- is the willingness, the simple willingness, of good citizens to answer the call to service."

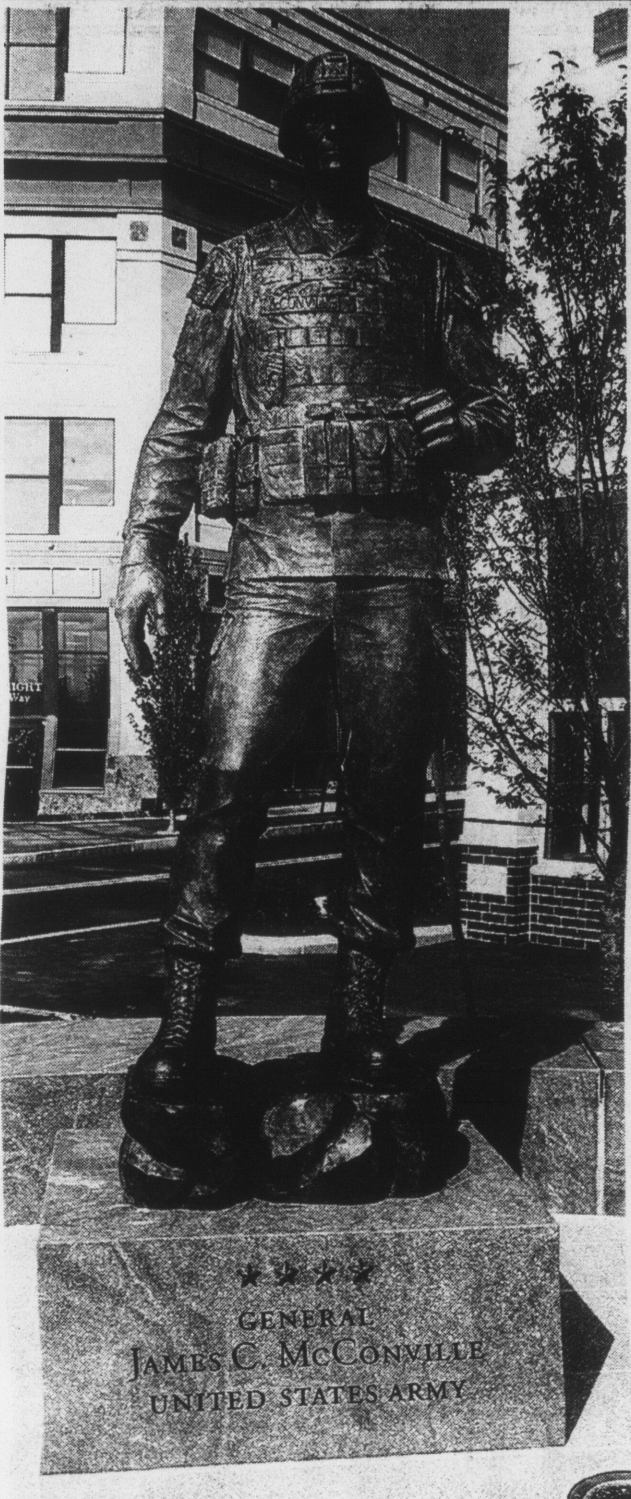

Dunford closed his remarks by saying he hopes the bridge and park inspire future generations to serve their country.

"My hope is that today's ceremony and the park and the bridge serve to remind us of what we have in Quincy, and reminds us of our responsibility to pass on our values and our traditions to the next generation of leaders."

"I hope when young people visit the park and the bridge, they see that public service and service in uniform is an honorable path to pursue, and I hope if they are inspired to follow that path...their experience is as rich and as rewarding as mine has been."

Michael Dunford - Gen. Dunford's brother and a retired Marine Corps lieutenant colonel - said their parents, Joseph Sr. and Katherine, taught them valuable life lessons from an early age.

"What I would really like to do this morning is introduce you to him by sharing a few words about what I believe prepared him to serve, directly led to the success he experienced, and why we gather today to recognize him," Michael Dunford said.

"My brother grew up in an Irish, working-class family. Our dad was a career Boston police officer, a man of high integrity who was dedicated to serving others. Our mom, like many of the moms of folks on this stage, is the backbone of our family. We were taught at a young age, through their example, of the importance of education, service to others, and hard work."

Gen. James McConville, who was also raised in Merrymount, has served as the chief of staff of the Army since 2019. McConville was the Army's vice chief of staff from 2017 to 2019 and had previously served as the commanding general of the 101st Airborne Division.

Early on in his remarks, McConville asked all the veterans in attendance, as well as their families, to rise and be recognized.

"Look at all these veterans — absolutely amazing," he said. "I want to thank you all for your service, I want to thank you for your sacrifice, and I want to thank you for commitment to our nation and so proudly representing Quincy."

"You are part of the 1 percent of Americans that have chosen to serve their country in the military," he added. "You all did your job, you all did it extremely well and you all made a difference for our nation and the world. Your service mattered."

McConville also recognized those killed 20 years prior during the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, and all those who have served in the armed forces since then.

"Today we recognize and remember the thousands of lives lost in the 9-11 terrorist attack 20 years ago. We remember the thousands of soldiers, marines, sailors and airmen — some who gave all — who have been fighting and defending our nation for the last 20 years, and we remember the 13 fallen heroes who gave all just this last month in Afghanistan," McConville said.

"We will never forget their sacrifice. We will strive every day to live up to the legacy that they have left us."

McConville said he is often asked about his hometown while traveling.

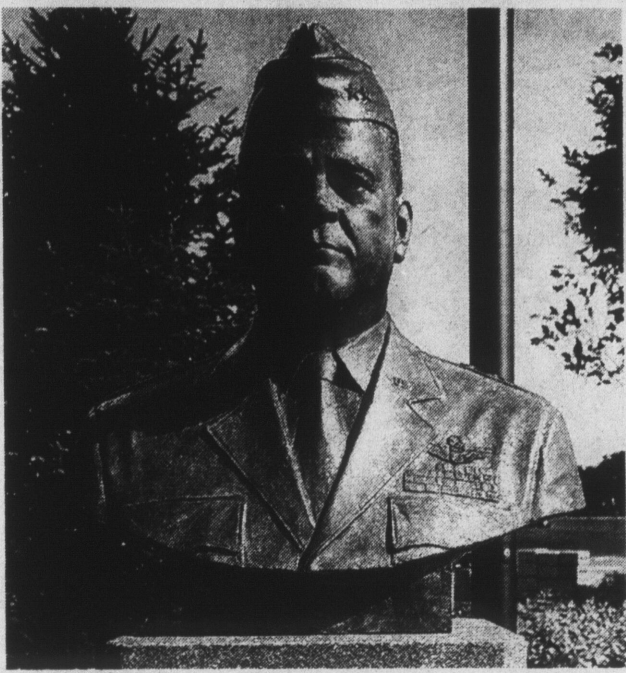

"I often get asked about the great people from Quincy that are serving in our military. They ask, 'what is in the water up there — what is it about Quincy that creates all these great leaders

Major Gen. CHARLES W. SWEENEY
United States Air Force

Major General Sweeney was a North Quincy High School graduate, who went on to attend Boston University and Purdue. In 1941, he joined the U.S. Air Force, where he served our country until 1976.

General Sweeney played an influential role in the conclusion of World War II, as he piloted the B-29 Superfortress bomber over Nagasaki, Japan in 1945. He completed more than 5,000 military flying hours and became a highly decorated soldier. The awards he received include, but are not limited to, the Silver Star, the Air Medal, the National Defense Medal, two Bronze Stars, the World War II Victory Medal and the National Defense Service Medal. Major General Sweeney later moved to Milton until he passed away in 2004 at the age of 84.

General Keefe held the position of Assistant Deputy Chief of the Air Force Reserve and was nominated by President Nixon as Air Force Brigadier General. Major General Keefe died in 2015 at the age of 93 in Prescott, AZ.

and military servicemen?" McConville said.

"I tell them it is not what is in the water, it's what is in the people, because people from Quincy are honorable. They are resilient. They are hard-working patriots who are willing to serve their country in a time of war knowing they are putting themselves in harm's way so others may enjoy freedom and prosperity.

"Again, I want to thank all those veterans who raised their right hand and said, 'send me,' and I also want to thank their family members."

McConville said the bridge and park honor all those from Quincy who have served in the military.

"Being part of this dedication is very humbling for me personally, but it represents so much more to me. It is a dedication to all the soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines and coast guardsmen who have served our country, who represent our hometown, Quincy, and represent it so well," he said. "I am so proud to call Quincy my hometown."

During his remarks, Mc-

Conville recalled playing together and participating in mock battles with Dunford while growing up before and serving together in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"He is a great marine and I have been privileged, not only to serve under his leadership during the Hillies and Swampies campaigns, but also to serve with him in the Battle of Fallujah in Iraq in 2004 and serve under his command when I was the 101st commander in Afghanistan," McConville said of Dunford. "Joe is a person of tremendous character, a true patriot, and a great example of the heroes that come from Quincy."

McConville currently resides at Fort Myer in Virginia, where he said he keeps a photograph of a young boy saluting and wearing a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps hat.

"That hat belonged to my great aunt Charlotte and she used to babysit this little boy and that little boy's name is General Gordon Sullivan, and he is right over here," McConville said, holding up a copy of the photo for all to see.

"It's been such a privilege to serve with the incredible leaders who are with me today."

McConville's lifelong friend, Kevin McCarthy of Quincy, introduced him during the dedication ceremony. McCarthy said McConville brought with him to West Point valuable life lessons he learned growing up in Merrymount.

"When Jim left for West Point at 18 years old 44 years ago in the summer of 1977, our neighborhood and lessons learned went with him. Quincy is a part of his DNA," McCarthy said.

"His illustrious military career and service to our country is one of the most amazing stories ever written. The Jim McConville I know is one of strong moral and physical courage. He is brave, cerebral, confident, decisive, empathetic, humble, loyal and poised."

Gen. Gordon Sullivan, who was raised in West Quincy, served as the chief of staff of the Army from 1991 to 1995. He had served as the Army's vice chief of staff from 1990 to 1991 and had previously been the commanding general of the 1st Infantry Division.

Sullivan recalled his mother taking him as a child to the Abigail Adams Cairn atop Penn's Hill, which marks the spot from which Abigail Adams and her son, John Quincy Adams, watched the Battle of Bunker Hill.

"When I was old enough to think, the first thing she did was take me to the Abigail Adams monument and explain what Abigail Adams did with her son. She showed him, on the day that Bunker Hill was under siege by the Brits. Most of you know that they won, with a big price," Sullivan said. "That was a lesson to me."

Sullivan also remembered visiting the Fore River Shipyard during World War II with his neighbor, whose husband worked at the yard.

"Some of the best warships in the world were built in that shipyard...that's what Quincy did, and down in Hingham," Sullivan said. "I saw Quincy men and women who contributed to the war effort with their sweat and some of them probably paid the price at the yard itself, because it is not easy to build ships."

Following his retirement from the Army, Sullivan served as the president and CEO of the Association of the United States Army for 18 years. Sullivan said he took that role to advocate on behalf of all servicemembers.

"We don't discriminate. If I am in there fighting for pay or other things, so be it. We are all in the same pot," he said. "The reason I take great pride in these projects is if you stick your hand up in the air at some recruiting station and say, 'send me, you are my hero.'"

Sullivan, who turns 84 on Sept. 25, said he would serve again if given the chance.

"There is nothing like being in a uniform and serving the United States of America. I have told many people, if I could do it again, I would. I'm not kidding," he said, before adding, "I don't know how good I'd be."

Introducing Sullivan during the dedication ceremony was Gen. Dennis Reimer, who served as chief of staff of the Army from 1995 to 1999. Reimer said Sullivan played an important role during a period transition for the Army following the Vietnam War.

"I congratulate the city of Quincy in making the bridge a symbol of recognition for these outstanding leaders. A bridge is something special because it allows you to go where you want to go," Reimer said.

"We experienced that in the Army. We experienced the need for a bridge that took us from the Fall of Saigon in 1975 to the Berlin Wall in 1989. Gordon Sullivan was one of the key leaders that led us through that period of time. That period was based upon changing the Army from a draft army to a volunteer army. It was based upon recruiting quality soldiers who have always been our hallmark; they are our credentials. And, it was based on tough realistic training.

"That Cold War army won the Cold War and a decisive victory in Desert Storm."

Brigadier Gen. Ronald Rand grew up in Germantown and Quincy Point and served 32 years in the Air Force. At the time of his retirement in 2004, Rand had been serving as the Air Force's director of public affairs. Following his retirement, he served as the president and CEO of the Medal of Honor Foundation for four years.

During the Sept. 11 dedication, Rand said his family's roots in Quincy run deep.

"We Rands are a Quincy family and we have been for a long time. My mom's family moved here in 1880, dad's about 30 years later," he said.

"I have lived in 20 places since I moved away and every where I have lived, every time somebody said where do you live, you tell them where you live. But if they say where are you from, the answer is always the same - I am from Quincy, Massachusetts."

One of 12 children, Rand said his parents, Allen and Dorothy, taught him and his siblings valuable life lessons.

"My dad served in the Navy during World War II then made his living at Quincy shipyard like so many other people. He was the tower of strength in our family, and he could fix, build or cook anything. My mom raised 12 kids while working her way up to vice president at the Wollaston

Also shown here is Mayor Thomas Koch who steps towards the podium. "We honor these generals for their devotion to our nation and the protection of its Constitution, our way of life, and the welfare of the men and women who don the uniform," Koch said. "These men never sought accolades or rank; they were chosen to lead because they possess the virtues of leadership: integrity, courage, humility, loyalty. A grateful city is proud to claim them as our own and promote their legacies to inspire service to the community and the United States of America," the mayor added.

Credit Union. She was the glue who held our family together - the one we could tell our secrets to. I wish they could both be here today," Rand said.

"They worked hard to provide for us, but their greatest gifts were teaching us the value of hard work, education, patriotism and honesty. Teaching us to treat people the way we wanted to be treated. Teaching us that there is nothing more important than family and there is no place like home. And, most of all, teaching us to love our brothers and sisters...we're all best friends today because of them."

Rand said he was glad to have served in the military, though he never meant to make a career out of it.

"I never set out to have a career in the military, but I am glad I did. I know it is not for everyone, but it was perfect for me - the places I went, the things I saw, the work I did and the people I served with, especially the people I served with. It was an extraordinary 32 years," he said.

"I will cherish those memories, those friendships, the honor and privilege of serving, and knowing I contributed in some small way for the rest of my days."

Rand's wife Berni and daughter Emily introduced him during the dedication ceremony.

"I just want to share three things about my dad - he loves his family, he loves his country, and he loves the New England Patriots," Emily Rand said. "For those reasons and more, I am proud to be his daughter."

"He is humble, funny, smart, loving and a devoted family man," Berni Rand said. "He is a wonderful husband, father, son, brother, uncle and a caring and loyal friend to so many. Emily and I are proud and blessed to have him in our lives."

assistant to the director, Defense Intelligence Agency, in Washington, McGinn is also a retired major with the Massachusetts State Police.

McGinn said he was in disbelief when he learned he was to be honored at the new bridge and park.

"To say being part of this park and bridge among the generals being honored is humbling is truly the understatement of a lifetime. When notified of being part of this dedication and monuments, many words and thoughts came to mind — disbelief, undeserving, confusion, surreal, just to name a few," he said. "The realization that this park and bridge would be around for future generations of family has only added to the overwhelming feelings."

McGinn reflected on his experience growing up in the city, such as playing sports with other neighborhood children, swimming in the quarries, and taking the bus to Quincy Center.

"I offer this trip down memory lane to highlight that Quincy is a special city," he said. "The city provided many opportunities for us kids and young adults. We learned to deal with conflict at a young age and probably inadvertently learned many lessons in leadership along the way."

McGinn said he hoped his place among the seven generals would represent all members of the National Guard.

"I hope that as part of this memorial I represent members of the National Guard that have gone before me, some paying the ultimate price for our freedom," McGinn said, including his own grandfather and namesake, Francis M. McGinn, a member of the National Guard who was killed in the Philippines during World War II.

"I would also like my place here to represent those guardsmen and women serving today. In the Massachusetts Army National Guard alone, over 11,600 have deployed overseas as part of ongoing operations since 9-11. The Guard has been increasingly called upon by Governor Baker and past governors to support civilian authorities whether it be for hurricanes, blizzards, tornadoes, wildfires out west, and over the past 18 months, domestic disturbances and support to COVID-19 relief efforts."

"We stand by our motto, 'Always Ready, Always There.' We in Massachusetts are proud of our heritage as the nation's first among the 54 states and territories, dating back to the first muster on the Salem Green on Dec. 13, 1636."

McGinn's children, Kaylee and Collin, introduced their father at the ceremony. As a daughter in a military family, Kaylee McGinn said she learned how precious time together can be.

"When your dad is away, maybe stationed in another state or deployed, you begin to understand that your dad can't be there for all your hockey games, he can't play a round of golf, and he probably won't be home for your recital," she said.

"As kids, we lost a lot of atomic bomb on Nagasaki in August 1945. Sweeney continued to serve after the war and was deployed to France as the commander of the 102nd Fighter Wing of the Massachusetts National Guard during the Berlin Crisis of 1961. Sweeney served until 1976 and died in 2004.

Speaking on his behalf was Navy Capt. Richard Stratton. Stratton, who also grew up in Montclair, was a naval aviator during the Vietnam War who was held as a prisoner of war for more than six years after his A-4 was shot down.

Stratton said that Sweeney was one of several North Quincy High School students from Montclair who joined the military during World War II.

"When it came time, and their country needed them, there was no question about whether you went here or there. You didn't go to Canada, you didn't go to the woods - you went to the recruiting station and you signed up," Stratton said.

Sweeney took part in the atomic bombing of Hiroshima on Aug. 6, 1945, Stratton noted, piloting a B-29 that served as an observation plane during the attack. Sweeney, Stratton said, then "manipulated it" so he could pilot the B-29 that would drop the second atomic bomb three days later. Piloting that plane, he said, "was no small feat."

"It wasn't just an average hop," Stratton said. "The weapon weighed about two tons. You had to have enough fuel to get to Japan and back to Guam."

Stratton recounted Sweeney's mission that day. Sweeney, Stratton explained, was unable to attack the mission's primary target, Kokura, because visibility over the city was too poor. Sweeney instead headed to the secondary target, Nagasaki, dropping the atomic bomb during his second pass over the city. Sweeney then flew to Okinawa, landing on the airfield there as his plane ran out of fuel.

"This is more than just aviation stories, because I am sure if you remember in August of 1945, the dropping of that second weapon is what convinced the emperor of Japan to fold up the war, fold up the tent and unconditionally surrender," Stratton said.

"Now, when you get all of the blather out of the way and take a look at it, my neighbor, Charlie Sweeney, right down the street in Montclair, is the man who won World War II."

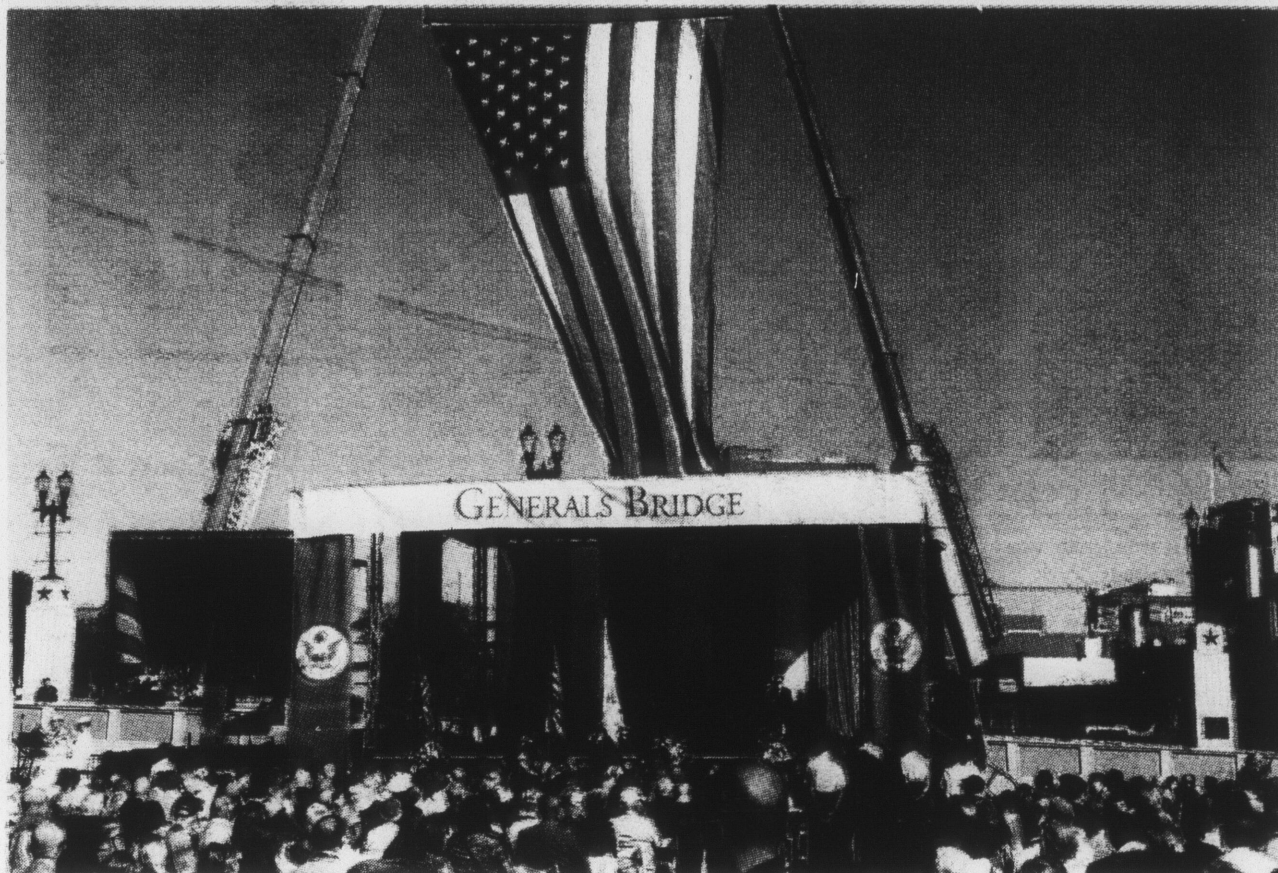

Major Gen. Stephen Keefe Jr. grew up in Houghs Neck. He served in the Army Air Corps during World War, serving in North Africa and Europe, and transferred to the Air Force Reserve following its establishment after the war. Keefe would later work at the Pentagon and at the time of his retirement in 1982 was serving as the assistant to the commander of 21st Air Force Group at McGuire Air Force Base in New Jersey. Keefe served on active and reserve duty while at the Pentagon and at McGuire Air Force Base.

In addition to his career in the military, Keefe maintained a law office in Quincy Center for 40 years and also worked as an assistant city solicitor under then Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa. Keefe died in 2015.

David Keefe, a retired major in the Air Force Reserve, spoke on behalf of his father at the ceremony. He said his father gained a sense of perseverance while growing up in Houghs Neck.

"His life was interrupted, and this is, I think, a testimony to the kind of challenges that anybody in the military goes through, with a call to service three times in addition to balancing a

STEPHEN KEEFE JR., a late major general in the Air Force Reserve, is honored with a bust within Generals Park. Keefe's son, David (above), said his father learned how to persevere while growing up in Houghs Neck. "His perseverance humbly reflects on growing up in Houghs Neck. Our neighborhood was loaded with soldiers who served on the front lines of World War II...and Korea," David Keefe said. "Their sacrifice defending our United States was truly amazing, and Generals Bridge is a monument not only to the officers that we honor but to their legacy as well."

CHARLES SWEENEY, a late major general in the Air Force, is honored with a bust within the new Generals Park. Sweeney piloted the B-29 that dropped an atomic bomb on Nagasaki during World War II. "When you get all of the blather out of the way and take a look at it, my neighbor, Charlie Sweeney, right down the street in Montclair, is the man who won World War II," said Navy Capt. Richard Stratton (above), who spoke on Sweeney's behalf at the Sept. 11 dedication ceremony.

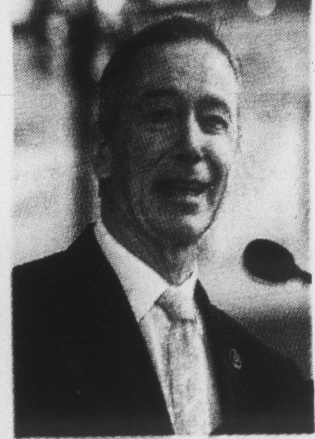

AIR FORCE Brigadier Gen. Ronald Rand said he enjoyed his time in the military, though he never meant to make a career out of it. "I know it is not for everyone, but it was perfect for me — the places I went, the things I saw, the work I did and the people I served with, especially the people I served with," he said. "It was an extraordinary 32 years."

ARMY NATIONAL GUARD Major Gen. Francis McGinn reflected on his time growing up in Quincy during his remarks. "Quincy is a special city," he said. "The city provided many opportunities for us kids and young adults. We learned to deal with conflict at a young age and probably inadvertently learned many lessons in leadership along the way."

MAYOR THOMAS KOCH served as the master of ceremonies for the Sept. 11 dedication of the Generals Bridge and Park in Quincy Center. Koch said the city chose to honor the generals "for their devotion to our nation and the protection of its constitution, our way of life, and the welfare of the men and women who don the uniform."

CONG. STEPHEN LYNCH offered his remarks during the dedication of the Generals Bridge and Park. "The men we honor today are not only the pride of Quincy, Massachusetts — they are the pride of our nation," he said. "They have served as guardians of the very ideals of freedom and justice and equality that have been at the vanguard of what it truly means to be an American."

law practice and military commitment. There were also two bouts of cancer that slowed him. Steve came back every time until his retirement and lived to the age of 93," David Keefe said.

"His perseverance humbly reflects on growing up in Houghs Neck. Our neighborhood was loaded with soldiers who served on the front lines of World War II in Asia and Europe, and Korea, like my dad. These men never reflected. They never bragged. They never even talked about their experiences in Asia or Europe, which I'm sure in some instances were horrible."

"These humble men came home, they married their sweethearts, they bought a little cottage on Edgewater Drive and different places in Quincy, and became firemen and policemen, Fore River Shipyard workers, clamdiggers. They made a living and raised their family. Their sacrifice defending our United States was truly amazing, and Generals Bridge is a monument not only to the officers that we honor but to their legacy as well."

Also speaking at the Sept. 11 dedication ceremony was US Rep. Stephen Lynch. Lynch credited Mayor Thomas Koch for his effort to dedicate the bridge to Quincy's generals.

"Sometimes in the midst of busy lives with competing demands of modern daily life, it is easy to forget — even in the midst of a historic American city like Quincy, Massachusetts, so steeped in history, a city that is intimately bound up in the stories of so many great men and women who have shaped this nation and whose sense of justice and decency has carried this nation through dark and difficult times," Lynch said.

"In today's society even in Quincy, one might be forgiven if we were to fall into the habit of taking our history for granted. But not on Tom Koch's watch. Today this ceremony — this well-deserved celebration of patriotic lives lived well — this was the singular vision of my friend and our mayor, Tom Koch."

"What we see today and what we saw last night is in part an expression of Tom Koch's loyalty to these men, to their families, to his own father, and to the people of the city of Quincy. Not surprisingly, this ceremony is a star-spangled example of who the people of this city are and the type of place that the city of Quincy remains."

Koch, who served as the master of ceremonies at the dedication, said the city chose to honor the generals "for their devotion to our nation and the protection of its constitution, our way of life, and the welfare of the men and women who don the uniform."

"These men and women never sought accolade or rank," he said. "They were chosen to lead because they possess the virtues of leadership: integrity, courage, humility, loyalty."

"A grateful city is proud to claim them as our own and promote their legacies to inspire service to the community and the United States of America."

The costs for the Sept. 11 ceremony and a reception held the evening before were paid for by private donors, Koch said. The mayor said those donors also helped raise $1.2 million for the Semper Fi & America's Fund — the non-profit Dunford chairs — which supports the military's wounded, ill and injured men and women.

Presidents Top Oliver Ames For 2nd Win, 21-31

By TOM JOYCE

Both offenses performed, but the pass defense was the difference-maker.

While the Quincy High football team threw for 130 yards in its home opener against the Oliver Ames Tigers Sept. 17, the team played tough pass defense and made it hard for the Tigers to gain anything in the air. The Presidents held their opponent to one completed pass in eight attempts, winning the game 21-13. The win put the Presidents at 2-0 on the season.

The tough pass defense was on display in OA's final two drives of the game. The Presidents turned the ball over on downs with 1:46 remaining after an incomplete pass from the 27-yard line. On the first play of OA's drive, the team's quarterback looked to connect with a receiver on a wheel route to the left side. It didn't work. Caleb Parsons-Gomes intercepted the ball for the Presidents and ran it back 30 yards into the end zone for a touchdown. Freshman Alex Martinez then made the extra point kick, giving the team a 21-13 lead with 1:36 remaining. Before this drive, Quincy was up 14-13.

The Presidents put pressure on OA on third-and-10. That included defensive end Nick Blasi, who forced a fumble. OA's quarterback recovered the fumble, albeit for a four-yard loss. OA's receiver did catch the pass. However, since it was late in the game and the team was trying to throw a pass and get out of bounds, the receiver caught the ball out of bounds. Defensive back Stephen Gallant was in coverage on the play for the Presidents.

When the Presidents got the ball back, they knelt it to end the game.

Although the Presidents won the game, they did trail by a point for part of the first half.

Following the opening kickoff, Oliver Ames started the game with the ball on the 35-yard line. The team was quickly forced to punt. OA picked up five yards on the first run of the game, but then the Presidents got a stop. OA tried a sweep, but defensive linemen Riley O'Connell and Luke Murphy swallowed up the running back for a four-yard loss. An incomplete pass with Parsons-Gomes in coverage then brought up fourth down and OA punted the ball down to the 20-yard line.

The Presidents turned the ball over on downs on their first drive around midfield. It was a drive highlighted by a 17-yard sweep from running back Jarod Walker (21 rushes, 152 yards), who was a major reason why the team had more than 200 rushing yards in the win. However, he was stopped short on fourth-and-two near midfield; Walker had a one-yard run and the team turned the ball over on downs.

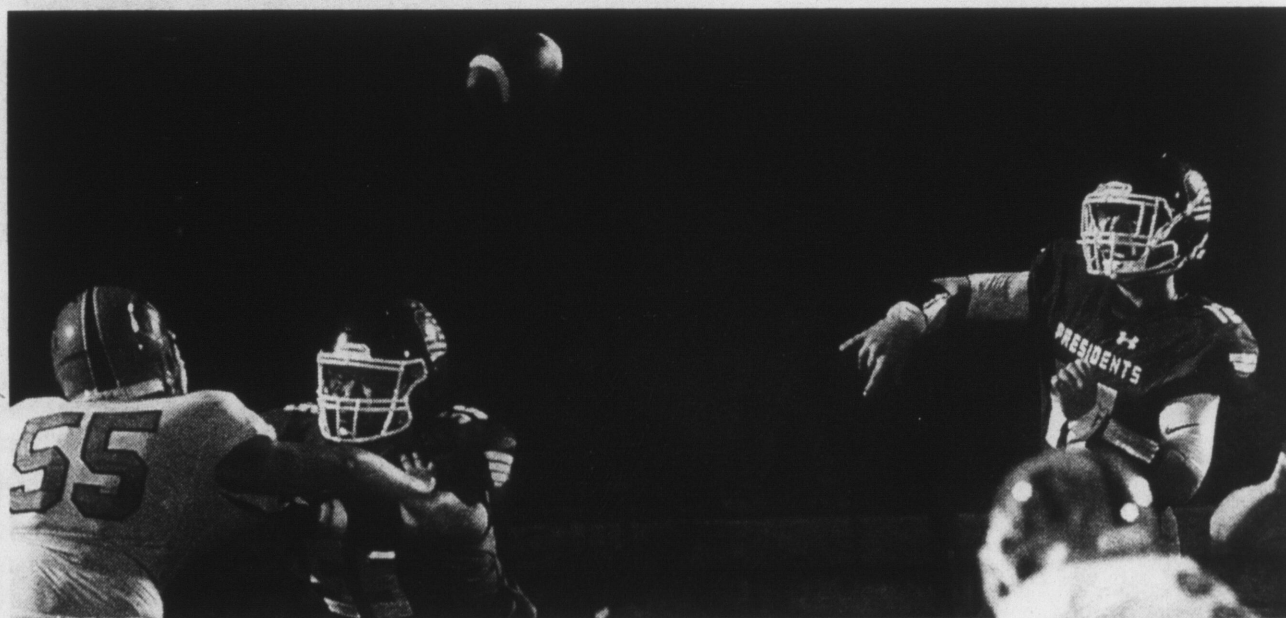

It wouldn't take the Presidents long to recover though -- recover a fumble. On the second play of OA's drive, the team fumbled and defensive back Brendan Regan recovered. It set up a scoring drive for the Presidents.

Running back Gabriel Rodrigues (7 rushes, 34 yards) started the drive off for the Presidents with a six-yard rush up the middle. Then, Stephen Gallant (6 rushes, 17 yards) picked up six for the team. The Presidents went to the ground again for their next big play. However, they went to Walker this time. He picked up 23 yards on a misdirection to get the Presidents into the red zone. He inched them further, picking up nine yards on a run and a facemask penalty to get the team to the four-yard line. However, a one-yard loss on a run and a holding penalty pushed the team back to the 15-yard line.

As a result, the Presidents went to the air. It worked. Quarterback Drew Boretti (8-for-18 passing, 130 yards) connected with wide receiver Jacey Ham (4 catches, 78 yards) on the left side of the end zone for a touchdown pass. The point after kick was no good, so the Presidents had a 6-0 lead with 37 seconds left in the first quarter.

The two teams then traded turnovers. Parsons-Gomes forced a fumble on OA and defensive lineman Devin Nellany recovered. The Presidents got the ball at the 39-yard line as a result and while a 22-yard sweep from Walker got them to the 17-yard line, they then threw an interception and gave OA the ball back. OA's defensive back picked up an additional 20 yards, so the team started the drive at the 37-yard line.

OA went to the ground and was strong. The team got its only completed pass of the game on this drive, a 13-yard reception for a first down to bring them around midfield. After that, the team established its run game with a 9-yard rush and an 11-yard rush up the middle. OA picked up a first down on a third-down with a 7-yard run and finished the drive with an 8-yard sweep. OA made its extra-point kick, giving the team a 7-6 lead with 3:38 left in the first half.

The Presidents responded with their most successful passing drive of the game. They started the drive at their own 15-yard line, but Boretti moved the ball in the air. He went 4-for-7 passing for 77 yards on the drive with Ham catching three of those balls for 62 yards. All of those catches were first downs. Plus, Will Ploof had a 15-yard grab for a first down. Boretti capped off the drive with a one-yard quarterback sneak. Walker put the team up 14-7 with a three-yard rush to the outside on the two-point conversion. This took the game into halftime.

The Presidents started the second half with the ball, but a holding penalty and false start resulted in a turnover on downs.

OA got the ball on its own 31-yard line. The team was one yard away from scoring on a drive highlighted by a 43-yard sweep and a fourth-down conversion on a QB sneak. However, on the one-yard line, the team's QB sneak failed. Gabriel Rodrigues stripped the ball, and Jacey Ham recovered for a touchback.

again turned the ball over on downs in OA territory. OA got the ball at its 35-yard line and capitalized. The team picked up three first downs on its first five runs. It finished the drive with a 29-yard run up the middle. OA went for the lead instead of the tie on the two-point conversion. It failed. OA's quarterback overthrew the ball, so they trailed 14-13 with 4:20 left in the game.

Trailing, OA went for an onside kick. Tight end Clayton Corley recovered it around midfield for the Presidents. Although Walker picked up 20 yards on his first two rushes of the drive, the Presidents turned the ball over on downs with 1:46 remaining, setting up the winning defensive stands.

The Presidents next game will take place on Friday, Sept. 24 on the road against Westwood. Kick off is 7 p.m.

Quincy Boys' Soccer Blanks Randolph, 4-0

By TOM JOYCE

The first half was competitive. The second half was not competitive.

The Quincy High boys' soccer team had no issue taking down the Randolph Blue Devils in non-league action Sept. 15. The Presidents hosted the Blue Devils and unleashed their offensive potential in the second half. They put up four goals in the final 40 minutes of the match and ended up winning 5-0. The win put the Presidents at 3-0-1 on the season.

"I'm excited, our guys have been working hard all summer and they're starting to reap in the benefits and the rewards," Presidents head coach Dan Mongo said. "It's the nicest group of guys in the world and they're the kinds of guys that I'd love to win or lose with, but it feels a lot better when we're getting results. We're hoping they can keep it up because they'll be the ones writing their own story this season."

Neither team had much going offensively early in the match, but the Presidents put one in the net with about two minutes left in the first half. The goal came off the foot of Daniel Pakkala and gave the team a 1-0 lead. In the first half, the Presidents had a few scoring chances, but Randolph made a couple of saves on shots.

Things were different in the second half.

About 15 minutes into it, Coleman Ross doubled his team's lead. He found an opening on a second chance opportunity as Randolph's goalie looked to the left side of the net. He booted the ball into the right side of the net unguarded. It was the start of a roughly 23-minute long stretch where the Presidents put up four goals.

Mongo said his team was more focused in the second half.

"They needed a little reminder of what they are capable of, but once they woke up and played at the level which they all know they are capable of, the results came just as we would expect that they would," he said.

The Presidents continued to play tough defense in the second half, limiting their opponent's opportunities. They would end up getting three more insurance goals, as they continued to show energy throughout the duration of the match.

Mongo said that the energy his team showed is one of their strengths.

"That's the biggest blessing in terms of being able to select a lineup. I have guys that are in the shape that they need to be," he said. "That gives me options to move different guys around, but our guys just don't have quit in them and I'm extremely proud of them."

With 18 minutes left in the match, Ryan Doherty put one in the back of the net. It wouldn't take the Presidents long to strike again. They almost immediately went back on the attack and this time, Zachary Donaghue struck. He scored two minutes after Doherty on a shot that hit the top left bar in the back of the net -- too high for the Randolph goalie to reach.

Then Huy Ho capped off the scoring effort with a goal with about two minutes remaining. This gave the team a 5-0 advantage.

Although he didn't show up in the goal log, Tom O'Neil shined defensively for the Presidents in the bout, Mongo said. He said that O'Neil shut down Randolph's top offensive player during the match.

The Presidents improved to 4-0-1 on the season after defeating Duxbury 4-1 Sept. 17 on the road two days after shutting out Randolph.

With his team off to a strong start, Mongo said that the team has two goals: make it to the postseason tournament and try to win the division.

"We have extremely well-rounded guys who take care of business in the classroom and are extremely polite and well-mannered," he said. "Just great people and because they have the work ethic and the stick-to-it-ness, they're able to play at levels beyond their own abilities."

The roster for the Presidents this season includes senior Hugh Crawford, ju-

Quincy and North Quincy will play a soccer doubleheader this Saturday, Sept. 25 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The girls' varsity teams will face off at 5 p.m. followed by the boys' teams at 7 p.m.

NQ Football Shuts Down Westwood For 2nd Win

By TOM JOYCE

Running and blocking were no problems for the North Quincy High football team last Saturday night.

Those were assets for the Raiders. The team excelled on the ground and played tough defense as they defeated Westwood, 31-0 Sept. 18. The win put them at 2-0 on the season.

In a game where the Raiders ran for more than 400 yards, they established dominance on the ground early. They took a 14-0 lead in the first quarter and never relinquished it.

Jordan Mahoney returned the opening kick to the Raiders 41-yard line. It took the Raiders just six plays to get the 59 yards they needed to score a touchdown on that opening drive. All of the plays were run plays and each gain was for at least five yards. The team showed its versatility at the position using four different running backs, but it was Thomas Murray who got the touchdown; he had a 10-yard counter run where he cut back after finding an opening up the middle. He also kicked the extra point, giving the team a 7-0 lead with 8:42 left in the first quarter.

Westwood showed promise on its first offensive drive, completing back-to-back short passes to start it off. The team picked up a first down as a result. However, Westwood went long on the third play of the drive and Hunter MacIsaac intercepted them. He gave the Raiders the ball back at their own 43-yard line.

MacIsaac (103 yards and a touchdown on 10 carries) also scored the touchdown on this drive for the Raiders. He and Matt Craig (138 rushing yards and two touchdowns on 13 carries) helped the Raiders move downfield. MacIsaac then converted on fourth-and-two from the Westwood 30-yard line. He broke free, juiced out a defender, and scored his first touchdown of the game. Murray's extra point was good and put the team up 14-0 with 4:53 left in the first.

Westwood responded with a pair of first downs in the air, but the team was forced to punt after Harry Gaudio came up with a sack for a loss of more than 10 yards on third-and-five. Westwood recovered the punt after it bounced off the face mask of the return man.

Westwood got the ball back at North Quincy's 24-yard line. However, the first play of the new drive was a sack by Grant Murphy and Gaudio for a 7-yard loss. Then, Colm Geary forced an incompletion by hurrying Westwood's quarterback. An unsportsmanlike conduct penalty and incomplete pass forced Westwood to punt again. This time, the ball rolled to the Raiders' 10-yard line.

The Raiders wouldn't score on the drive, but they got into scoring territory. Michael Gorman (116 yards on 10 carries) had a 50-yard run on the drive, bringing them up to the 35-yard line. However, Westwood made a couple of stops in the red zone. The Red Raiders went for a 30-yard field goal attempt as a result, but the kick missed.

Westwood couldn't capitalize on its strong defensive stand, though. An incompletion and a sack by Gaudio and Brandon Baker brought up fourth down and forced them to punt after initially picking up a first down. The punt then went off the side of the foot of the punter, giving the Raiders the ball at the 42-yard line. Gorman picked up a 19-yard run on the drive to get the team in the end zone, but Westwood played tough red zone defense. An incomplete waggle pass brought up fourth-and-seven. This time, Murray's 31-yard field goal attempt was successful, putting the Raiders up 17-0 with 3:06 left in the first half.

MacIsaac intercepted a halfback pass from Westwood around midfield, but the Raiders turned the ball over on downs around Westwood's 30-yard line. Jackson Murphy then recovered a Westwood fumble. However, Westwood made a couple of stops in the red zone and the Raiders missed their 28-yard field goal attempt to end the first half.

Westwood started the second half with a three-and-out thanks to a holding penalty and a sack from both Gorman and Gaudio. This gave the Raiders the ball around midfield.

When they got the ball back, the Raiders slowed down the pace of the game and took their time between plays. They continued to run the ball and quarterback Cooper Hansen converted on a third-and-one QB sneak to keep the drive alive in the red zone. Craig scored an eight-yard touchdown run on a sweep. Murray's extra point kick was good, putting them up 24-0 with 2:58 left in the third quarter.

Westwood had another three-and-out, in part thanks to an underthrown incompletion from the quarterback as he faced pressure from a blitzing defense. The punt gave the Raiders the ball at Westwood's 46-yard line.

Craig would score the team's final touchdown of the game on the drive. He broke a few tackles on a pitch that resulted in a 27-yard touchdown run. Murray hit the extra point, making it 31-0 Raiders with 11:48 left in the game.

Since the Raiders took a lead of 30 points or more in the fourth quarter, the game went to a running clock. Neither team would score again, but the Raiders second offense got to the red zone before letting the clock run out.

The next game for the Raiders will take place this Friday, Sept. 24 on the road against Abington. Kick off is 7 p.m.

AAA: MA Gasoline Prices Up One Penny

Massachusetts's average gas price is up one cent from last week ($3.09), averaging $3.10 per gallon.

Monday's price is five cents higher than a month ago ($3.05), and 98 cents higher than Sept. 20, 2020 ($2.12). Massachusetts's average gas price is nine cents lower than the national average.

"Hurricane Nicholas

complicated and slowed the recovery from Ida, but the seasonal drop-off in demand helped mitigate price increases on the week," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast Director of Public Affairs. "We aren't in the clear yet, though. We are only at the mid-point for hurricane season, and it has been an active one so far, with 17 named storms already. Motorists can expect price fluctuations into October."

AAA Northeast's Sept. 20 survey of fuel prices found the current national average to 2 cents higher than last week ($3.17), averaging $3.19 a gallon. Today's national average price is 2 cents higher than a month ago ($3.17), and $1.01 higher than this day last year ($2.18).

QPS Nurses Determining How Many Students Are Vaccinated

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy Public Schools nurses are working to determine how many students in the school system have gotten the COVID-19 vaccine, Supt. Kevin Mulvey recently told the School Committee.

At the Sept. 8 meeting of the school board, Mulvey noted 62 percent of all individuals in Quincy ages 12 to 15 – a group that would include QPS students and non-QPS students – were fully vaccinated against the coronavirus, as were 74 percent of individuals between the ages of 16 and 19. Those numbers were both from the state Department of Public Health's weekly municipal report issued on Sept. 2.

The Sept. 9 report from the Department of Public Health, which was released the day after the school board met, indicated 64 percent of individuals ages 12 to 15 were fully vaccinated, as were 75 percent of those ages 16 to 19. The same report also states that 73 percent of those ages 12 to 15 were partially vaccinated, along with 83 percent of those ages 16 to 19.

While the state has provided community-level vaccination data, Mulvey said school nurses were in the process of determining how many Quincy Public Schools students have been vaccinated.

"We are working on trying to actually identify how many of these students are QPS students and our nursing staff are working diligently to see if we can actually get a concrete number as to how many of our students are actually vac-nated," he said.

"Our nurses are working now through their databases to identify exactly, to the best of their ability, percentage wise and numbers wise, how many of our students are vaccinated."

Mulvey said he hoped to present those numbers to the School Committee at its upcoming meeting on Sept. 22 or at its subsequent meeting on Oct. 13.

At a School Committee meeting on Aug. 18, the superintendent had said approximately 550 of the 4,400 Quincy Public School students eligible to get vaccinated had done so. Rita Bailey, the district's health services coordinator, said at the time that that number was based on a state database the district has access to, and could be higher if pediatricians administered shots and did not enter them into the database.

At the Sept. 8 meeting, Mulvey said the 550 number he provided in August was based on information available to the district through its SNAP system at the end of the previous school year in June.

"[It] was snapshot at the end of the school year in June. It did not capture what may have occurred over the summer," he stated. "Our nurses are now working on updating the database against the state information, so we're hopeful that we will actually have an accurate picture once the nurses are done updating the SNAP system, basically working to chronicle every student that has been vaccinated in the system."

"I'm hopeful that we will have an accurate picture for you either by the next school committee meeting or by Oct. 13. The nurses have been diligently working on that since their return last week."

Ahead of the new school year, state officials on Aug. 25 enacted a new mandate requiring all public school students ages 5 and up, staff in all grades, and visitors to schools to wear masks at all times, with certain exceptions, while indoors at school. Masks are not required outdoors. As of Oct. 1, if a school demonstrates a vaccination rate of 80 percent or more among students and staff in the school, then vaccinated individuals in that school would no longer be subject to the state mask requirement.

The state's mask mandate was issued one week after the Quincy School Committee agreed to continue requiring all individuals in school buildings to wear masks while at school.

At the Sept. 8 meeting, Mulvey said the Quincy Public Schools' mask mandate would remain in place until the School Committee agrees to change it.

"As I said at the last meeting, we won't be making any changes to the mask mandate unless I meet with this body and this body determines that the mask mandate should be amended," he said.

The superintendent said he is awaiting guidance from the state on how the district can determine how many QPS employees have gotten vaccinated.

"We have not received guidance from the state that would allow us to ask that question as of yet," he said.

Mulvey on Sept. 8 also said a pair of COVID-19 testing initiatives – pooled testing and test and stay – would begin this week within the school system.

The pooled-testing program means nasal swabs from multiple individuals are collected in a single tube and then tested at the same time. If a pool tests positive for the virus, additional testing – with either a rapid antigen test or a PCR test using a second swab taken at the same time the first sample is taken – is used to determine who in that group is positive.

The test and stay program, which is new this year, allows close contacts to remain in school provided they take a rapid antigen test daily for at least five days and continue to test negative.

The superintendent encouraged all staff and students – vaccinated and unvaccinated alike – to sign up for those programs.

"There are a number of questions that keep coming up from people calling, whether they need to do this if they're vaccinated and the state is recommending, and of course we are too, that all students and staff, vaccinated or unvaccinated, participate in this program," Mulvey said.

"The whole idea of pool testing and test and stay is to maximize our ability to keep students and staff in schools safely and through this COVID-19 pandemic, and we can do that if people participate in pooled testing and test and stay."

Lighthouse Fellowship Church On Lawn Continues Through October

Lighthouse Fellowship at 73 Newbury Ave. in North Quincy meets each Sunday at 10 a.m. During the summer the services have been held on the lawn with shade provided by canopies.

Church On the Lawn will continue through October and all are invited to join this time of corporate worship. In the event of rain the service will be held indoors.

Pastor Mike Fehan's messages have been focused on the purpose of our life: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength." (Matthew 12:30) He has considered love's definition, including patience, kindness, and humility, as well as aspects of God's love such as the provision of a Savior, His disciplines, and the certainty of our eternal calling even in desperate times. All messages are live-streamed on YouTube: https://youtu.be/rX_Q0q8EoPM. Sunday school classes for K-12th grade are also offered each Sunday at 9 a.m.

On Sept. 12 the worship service on the lawn was followed by a baptism at Orchard Beach in Squantum. Friends, family and the church family rejoiced as Kiley Shionis made a public statement of her faith in the Lord Jesus Christ and was baptized by Pastor Mike. Kiley at this time serves as an intern at Lighthouse Fellowship and plans to return to mission work in the future.

During the week people are welcome to join the morning devotional time on Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 7 a.m. On Wednesday mornings at 10 a.m. there is a women's Bible study in person at the church and on zoom. Tuesday evening meetings alternate between Men's Group and All Church Bible study. On Sept. 28 it will be the Men's Group. Thursday evenings there is also a home group study in Braintree. You may call the church for details: 617-847-4444 or email lighthouse.quincy@gmail.com.

The Youth Group meets each Friday evening from 7-9 p.m. for a time of sports, Bible study discussion and pizza. In recent weeks some of the boys travelled to Milinocket, Maine to install new playground equipment at Faith Baptist Church. Their hard work was greatly appreciated and the boys enjoyed some good fishing too.

Lighthouse Fellowship is presently seeking donations for House of Hope, Orphanage in Cameroon. The church regularly supports this ministry, but as the school year begins there are particular needs for the children. Donations of backpacks, notebooks, pens, pencils and clothes may be dropped off at the church on Sunday mornings from 8:30 - 11:30, or left on the porch of the parsonage next door at any time until Oct. 24. You may call the church if you would like items picked up.

The House of Hope Orphanage is home to 55 children, from ages 1 to 19, most of them having lost one or both parents in the on-going crisis in the English speaking NW and SW regions of Cameroon. Others were starving, sick or malnourished children whom the relatives could not provide for at home. It was founded by

He taught at St. Benedict Preparatory School and Seton Hall Preparatory School, both in New Jersey. Rev. O'Leary was chaplain for Veterans Administration Hospitals for 22 years in Albany, NY and Los Angeles, CA. His hobbies include motorcycle riding and piloting sea-planes or midget planes.

THE REV. GERALD J. O'LEARY

He is predeceased by his dear parents Daniel and Mary O'Leary; he is also predeceased by his brother Daniel O'Leary, and his sisters Eileen Trahan and Mary Dundon; beloved brother of Ann Kelley of Belmont.

George 'Chuck' Nason

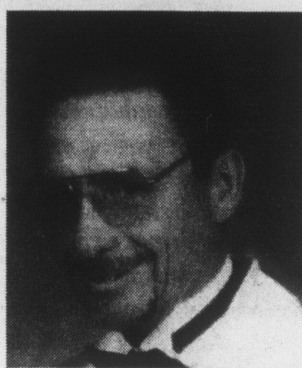

George "Chuck" Nason was born on Feb. 6, 1945 in Tewksbury. He died at home in Quincy on Sept. 9, 2021. He is much loved by his surviving family: his wife of 44 years, Kathy Nason, his son and daughter-in-law, Kurt and Eah Young Nason, and his sister, Joan Ames, as well as a number of nieces and nephews. His cats have been sad since he went away.

Mr. Nason was orphaned as an infant and stayed at a Boston orphanage until he was about 6 years old. From the orphanage, he went to a foster home. Life was good there, and George learned the finer things in life, like setting a table, receiving Christmas presents, and getting his nickname-Chuck. He finally went home to his adoptive parents Myron and Dorothy Nason in Braintree at the age of 8. In high school, he was a talented gymnast (especially the rings), and during the summer he worked as a lumberjack up in Maine.

Mr. Nason was a proud Navy veteran and an even prouder corpsman attached to the Marines, from 1964 to 1968. Some of his time with the Navy was on a tugboat in Cuba (where he apparently had a disagreement with a horse, the horse lost the fight) and aboard the USS Forrestal aircraft carrier. He spent a year in Vietnam as a corpsman.

He ultimately settled down to work at AT&T (now Verizon) for 30 years and married Kathy in 1977. They have lived in Quincy ever since. Mr. Nason was astonishingly talented, and his strength was legendary. There was literally nothing he couldn't do-carpentry, plumbing, electrical, mechanical, fishing, hunting. He developed an interest in archery and made bows and arrows starting with cutting down the appropriate tree.

He and Kathy traveled to Mexico, California, New

GEORGE 'CHUCK' NASON

Mexico, Maine, Vermont, the Caribbean, Louisiana, and Ireland. He received numerous awards for his volunteer services to Habitat for Humanity, the Elks, the Braintree Rifle and Pistol Club, and for his work at the phone company. He was the first man selected to escort a newly adopted baby from South Korea to her parents in America. The stories about what he did for neighbors and friends are quite numerous. He did everything from taking down trees for people, to fixing their cars and homes.

His biggest and ultimate joy was the arrival of his son, Kurt, from Korea in 1985. Mr. Nason's pride in his son was intense and infinite. Mr. Nason overcame much and was an outstanding man.

Seasons Hospice and Palliative care provided sensitive care and the family is thankful. Friends came by to tell him how much he meant to them and Godspeed. Late afternoon on Sept. 9, 2021, he finally slept with lingering memories of his family's hugs and kisses.

Services and interment will be held privately at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wounded Warrior Project, P.O. Box 758517, Topeka, KS 66675 or online at support.woundedwarriorproject.org.

Lighthouse Fellowship Church On Lawn Continues Through October

Sister Malvis Ayaba who, without any basic training in social work or experience as an educator, could not tolerate seeing children dying of malnutrition, starvation and disease. She also realized that a whole generation of children were losing out on education. So armed with her simple maternal instincts of love, care and compassion, she started out with five orphans.

In her own words, Sister Malvis said, "I founded the House of Hope to give my children HOPE and a better chance at life; to nurture them and provide a safe, secure place to grow up; to provide them with good health and an education in a Christian and godly environment."

For over six months Sister Malvis has been gravely ill with kidney and liver disease. It was planned to help her get medical treatment in India, but the serious Covid problem in India made that impossible. The orphanage is currently in a temporary accommodation offered by a kind benefactor. Meanwhile permanent dormitories and classrooms are under construction. Financial help is also needed to complete these simple structures. By having their own school they will avoid paying costly school fees for each child. All contributions will be a great blessing to God's children in Cameroon.

If you have a prayer request let Lighthouse Fellowship know by calling or emailing. A prayer group will receive requests and pray for you.

Learning Lessons Outside the Classroom

(Y.E.S.) program partners area high school students with seniors to help them understand and make use of modern technology. This program gives young adults the opportunity to give back to their community and forge important relationships with seniors in their community.

We also have a number of resources that help young people understand the importance of making good choices and learning about the consequences of their actions in a safe and controlled environment.

Our adventure-based programming makes use of our ropes course to guides youth groups and non-profit organizations through team-building and leadership exercises. Our school outreach officers are engaging with students across the county to teach them about important issues, including drug abuse and bullying. And our Distracted Driving program gives young drivers a safe and low-stakes environment to learn how distractions in a car can quickly turn dangerous through the use of a high-tech car simulator.

I know that strong families are one of the most important elements in helping young people develop the skills to make good choices, and I want to continue to provide family-friendly events that give families the chance to bond and grow together. This is why we put on our recent Back-to-School outdoor movie night, and I look forward to organizing similar events throughout the year so families can enjoy some quality family time.

I want young people and parents alike to see the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office as a real and relevant resource for helping them develop into engaged and responsible adults. This is part of my office's focus on public safety as prevention - keeping people safe is not just about catching criminals. It is also about giving people the means to be productive members who give back to their communities. By investing in our youth, the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office aims to give young people a chance to learn the skills they need as they grow into our future leaders.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD – Can you believe Macaulay Culkin turned 41 on Aug. 26, and that the star of the “Home Alone” franchise became the father of a son on April 5? He met girlfriend Brenda Song – of Disney Channel’s “The Suite Life of Zack & Cody” (2005-08) and “The Suite Life on Deck” (2008-11) – when they starred together in “Changeland” (2019), and they’ve been together ever since.

And miracle of miracles, Culkin’s career is reborn too, and not because of his cameo in “Home Sweet Home Alone,” starring Ellie Kemper, Kenan Thompson and Chris Parnell, premiering Nov. 2 on Disney+. That can’t compare with the starring role handed to him by Ryan Murphy in “American Horror Story: Double Feature,” which premiered Aug. 25. He was enticed to sign up when Murphy told him, “Your character has crazy erotic sex with Kathy Bates,” to which Culkin countered, “This sounds like the role I was born to play!”

What could have motivated Ryan Murphy to offer Culkin this plum role? Murphy admitted, “I’m so excited for him to be in my world because I think I’m gonna want to do a lot of things with him, if he wants to work, because I think he’s fascinating and interesting, and he has a soul. There’s both a lightness and darkness with Macaulay Culkin that I’m attracted to.”

Benjamin Bratt, former “Law & Order,” “Private Practice” and Fox series “Star” (with Queen Latifah for three seasons), is set to star in the theatrical Western film “Dead for a Dollar,” directed by Walter Hill, with Christoph Waltz, Willem Dafoe and Rachel Brosnahan. Also upcoming is Ava DuVernay’s four-part HBO Max series “DMZ,” starring Rosario Dawson. Bratt’s last film was “A Score to Settle,” starring Nicolas Cage, which died at birth. Bratt has been married to actress Talisa Soto since 2002, and has a daughter and a son with her.

The 1984 film “The Karate Kid,” which spawned four sequels, an animated series and the Netflix series “Cobra Kai” (renewed for a fourth season), with original stars Ralph Macchio, William Zabka, Martin Kove and Sean Kanan (from “Karate Kid III”), will now become a Broadway musical written by the original screenwriter, Robert Mark Kamen. Can we expect a karate ballet?

When CBS canceled “Hawaii 5-0” in April 2020, after 10 years, it needed something to fill its Hawaiian studios. So guess what? We’ll now be treated to yet another “NCIS” spin-off, “NCIS Hawaii,” which debuted Sept. 20. This time the team is led by a woman, played by Vanessa Minnillo (now known evermore as Vanessa Lachey, her married name, thanks to 98 Degrees rocker Nick Lachey). The cast is mostly unknown, except maybe for Canadian male model Noah Mills...I jest!

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Wooden Tea Caddy – It seems strange today that early wooden tea caddies (special boxes for tea) were made with a lock and key. Tea was a very expensive drink in the 1600s. It gave added energy and after the addition of sugar, milk and sometimes lemon, it had a pleasing taste.

The earliest tea caddies in England were made of porcelain shaped like a bottle with flat sides and a lid. Most were made in Holland. By the 1700s, there were large tea chests (caddies) that were made of mahogany, rosewood and other attractive types of wood. The valuable tea was kept in a box decorated with ivory, brass, ebony or silver to show its importance. Most had two or three sections that held a glass liner for the tea. The tea was served in an important room, so the tea caddy was made to resemble the furniture of the day.

A recent Cottone auction sold an English Tunbridge ware tea caddy with inlay picturing Queen Victoria. The caddy was connected to a pedestal, also decorated with inlay. The impressive tea caddy sold for $2,950.

Q: I’m a retired letter carrier. When my son was born in 1975, one of my patrons gave me a gift of Dewar’s White Label Scotch Whiskey. I’ve never opened it. The bottle is encased in cardboard and is in the original tin box. Is there any value because of its age? Is it still good to drink?

A: John Dewar & Sons started out as a wine and spirits shop in Perth, Scotland, in 1846. Dewar’s founded a distillery in Aberfeldy, Scotland, in 1898.

White Label Scotch Whiskey was first made in 1899. The company changed hands several times and has been owned by Bacardi since 1998. White Label is Dewar’s most popular brand and a top seller in the United States. Old liquor in unopened bottles is safe to drink. Some people think older bottles of scotch and other distilled spirits are better than newer ones. An old bottle of Dewar’s White Label Scotch Whiskey in a tin box sold online for more than $100. Even an old partly full bottle without the box sold for more than a new bottle. The old tin boxes are collected and sell for near $100. A new, full bottle is about $25. An empty bottle is worth under $10.

CURRENT PRICES

Toy, Flintstones train, Bedrock Express, Fred & Wilma in locomotive, stone graphics, tin lithograph, zigzag action, metal bell, Marx, box, 12 inches, $415.

Strange BUT TRUE

• During the entire run of Gilligan’s Island, it was never revealed if “Gilligan” was his first or last name.

• Although lesser known today, the temperance novel “Franklin Evans; or, The Inebriate: A Tale of the Times” was one of Walt Whitman’s most commercially successful works. The great American poet wrote this novel at the start of his career, strictly for cash. Interestingly, considering the book’s subject matter, he later admitted that he wrote it in a three-day drunken stupor.

• Tic Tacs got their name from the sound they make when they are tossed around in their container.

• The gelatin in Haribo gummy bears contains nine out of the 10 amino acids that are essential to our bodies.

• On Feb. 1, 2005, the Emergency Alert System was accidentally activated in portions of Connecticut, calling for the immediate evacuation of the entire state. Later studies showed that citizens’ common sense prevailed, with the typical response being to “change the channel” or seek other confirmation.

• Between 12,000 and 15,000 bicycles are retrieved from the bottom of Amsterdam’s canals each year.

• In Ethiopia, a spot known as “The Gateway to Hell” is one of the hottest on earth, with air that’s toxic to humans. Scientists have found organisms in its acid pools that are capable of surviving without oxygen.

• After the release of the 1996 film “Scream,” which involved an anonymous killer calling and murdering his victims, Caller ID usage tripled in the United States.

• Your ears secrete more ear wax when you are afraid than when you aren’t.

• 1912 saw the last Olympic gold medals made entirely out of gold.

Now here’s a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

• Have your carpets cleaned. High-traffic areas may require cleaning as often as every three or four months, but bedrooms can go as long as 18 months. Use runners and area rugs to safeguard spots that may be vulnerable, like under a vanity or by your sofas.

• “I had some residue on my bathroom ceiling from hard water condensation. I happened to have a set of crutches lying around. I used a hair elastic to secure a hand towel to the arm rest of one crutch. Then I sprayed it with water and used it to scrub the ceiling. It worked really well. I was done in no time.” – A.A. in Florida

• Two ways to remove a bandage: Rub a little baby oil or vegetable oil over it. The oil will soak in and make it easier to remove. Or – and this works especially well with kids – have them soak in the bath and use baby shampoo to soften the sticky edges.

• A baking soda and water mix is great for tile floors if you want a quick mop up. If a lot of your floors are tile, do yourself a favor and invest in a steam mop. They clean and sanitize, leaving your floors brilliant.

• Be sure you use a trivet or other protectant when placing flowerpots on wood floors. Also, purchase felt pads for the bottoms of furniture. This will eliminate divots or other kinds of depressions or scratches in the floor.

• “Tiny tears in your window screen can be secured with clear nail polish. I dab the spot, then use tweezers to line up the tiny wires, then dab again. Just make sure the window is open, or the screen might stick to the window-pane.” – T.T. in Indiana

Q: Whatever happened to Gloria Reuben? I loved her on "ER" but haven't seen her in anything since. Is she still acting? — M.J.

A: The Canadian actress earned two Emmy nominations for her role as an HIV-positive medical professional on "ER." She also has a beautiful voice, having been a back-up singer for Tina Turner on her Twenty Four Seven Tour in 2000. After her run on "ER," Reuben booked regular and recurring roles on several TV series, including as an assistant D.A. on "Law & Order: SVU," a mayor on "Saints & Sinners" and a therapist on "Mr. Robot."

Next up, she'll play Valerie Jarrett in the highly anticipated Showtime series "The First Lady," which also stars Gillian Anderson as Eleanor Roosevelt, Michelle Pfeiffer as Betty Ford and Viola Davis as Michelle Obama. Look for it in 2022. This fall, Reuben will star in the Lifetime movie "Torn From Her Arms," based on a true story about the border crisis. Reuben will play Ginger Thompson, a Pulitzer Prize-winning ProPublica reporter opposite Judy Reyes ("Scrubs"), who portrays a Texas immigration attorney. "Torn From Her Arms" will premiere Saturday, Oct. 30, at 8 p.m. ET.

Q: Who were the comedians who died recently of a drug overdose? Who was the survivor? — E.J.

A: Kate Quigley, Fuquan Johnson, Enrico Colaneri and Natalie Williamson were hanging out Sept. 4 at a Venice, California, residence where cocaine laced with fentanyl was allegedly shared. All but Quigley died from an overdose. She's a stand-up comedian who has appeared on "The Office" (she played a server on the "Casino Night" episode) and hosts a podcast called "#DateFails." She most recently was in a relationship with singer Darius Rucker ("Hootie & the Blowfish"). Johnson and Colaneri, who died at the scene, worked at the HaHa Comedy Club in North Hollywood, and Williamson was a friend. Quigley was hospitalized in critical condition but pulled through, posting a message online to her fans to "please don't take this life for granted. I did, and I never will again."

Fentanyl is a powerful synthetic opioid that is 50 to 100 times more potent than morphine. It's reportedly claimed the lives of many noteworthy talents, including musician Prince, Oscar-winning actor Philip Seymour Hoffman and teen actor ("The Flash") Logan Williams. Its lethality isn't just limited to Hollywood. To learn more about fentanyl abuse in communities everywhere, visit SAMHSA.gov.

Q: Will "Killing Eve" be coming back, or is it done? I know sometimes British series aren't meant to be long-running, but I hope this one continues. — U.M.

A: Instead of "seasons," British TV shows call their groups of episodes "series," and "Killing Eve" has had three series so far. Each series has been penned by a different female head writer telling the tale of intelligence officer Eve Polastri (played by Sandra Oh) in pursuit of an assassin named Villanelle (Jodie Comer). The fourth and final installment of the Emmy-nominated BBC series will air sometime in 2022, but several spin-offs apparently are in the works.

Each numbered row contains two clues and two 6-letter answers. The two answers differ from each other by only one letter, which has already been inserted. For example, if you exchange the A from MASTER for an I, you get MISTER. Do not change the order of the letters.

Why Risk Buying a Pet Overseas?

DEAR PAW'S CORNER:

I'm writing in response to your recent article about pet imports from overseas being banned. Potential pet owners may be frustrated by this rule, but what is their reason for going outside the country? Most likely, they want to purchase a purebred dog at a lower price. Buying a dog overseas is very risky. The countries mentioned in the temporary ban are listed for a reason. Often the breeding is poor, and standards are low. A country's culture can play a role. They learn what is wanted, they produce, and you buy.

The old saying, "You get what you pay for," applies here. Many owners end up spending more in vet bills than they saved on an overseas dog. The risk is yours. There are many good breeders in the U.S., but they're not always easy to find. The U.S. is not perfect and has poor breeders too. But certain standards must be met, and it will show in a so-so breeder. Three things to look for are:

1. Sanitary conditions. If the place you visit smells at all, go no further.
2. Do puppies live in the house and not in a kennel? The best of breeders will not replace human contact from birth.
3. Selling too soon. Baby animals need their mothers. A good pup has stayed with its mother ideally for 11 or 12 weeks. Anyone willing to sell under 8 weeks should raise your eyebrow.

The American Kennel Club has good representatives taking calls. They are often breeders themselves and can guide you to your choice of breed. Why not get the best and safest dog? It's important to trust your breeder. Be safe — buy American! — Colleen R., via email

DEAR COLLEEN: You told them, and I thank you.
